A Heavy Earth Late, for "Plans" Storm, Whale, Meteor I'm One of Them

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1922, by Star Co.

Lord Newton tells the British House of Lords that 800 tons of soot fall yearly on each square mile of London. A heavy weight, but the old earth would scarcely notice it. According to Oliver Lodge, this earth weighs six thousand trillion tons. And the English trillion is what we call a quintillion. Write down 1, add 18 zeros. Multiply that by six thousand and you have the number of tons the earth weighs. The moon weighs millions, possibly billions, of tons; they don't know exactly. When it falls on this earth, as it must do eventually, according to scientists, it will cause commotion, but it won't knock the heavy earth out of its path. That's hundreds of millions of years off. Don't worry.

The Cabinet "plans to act" in the railroad strike. It's time. The railroads belong to the people. They made them, support them, and have been, to a large extent, ruled and exploited by them.

A nation that would not allow its water supply to be cut off should not allow its transportation supply to end or its food supply to be menaced.

This does not mean that owners of railroads should be put at the mercy of strikers or compelled to yield without a hearing. There should be plenty of hearings, fair to both sides, and the public interest and public sense of justice should decide.

Meanwhile the railroads should run.

And what applies to railroads applies to coal mines and other public necessities.

The Scandinavian ship Frederick VIII. reports a heavy storm, a large whale and one very big meteor that dropped flaming, hissing and sizzling into the ocean.

Times and theories change. Moderns know that the storm was caused by air rushing in to fill a space from which hot air had risen. We know that no devils were riding on the storm to wreck mariners.

We know the whale wasn't following the ship hoping that somebody might jump overboard and be taken as passenger.

We know that the "falling star" was simply one of millions of meteors constantly falling on the earth, usually melted by the heat of friction as they rush through the air, and was not an attempt by supernatural power to hit some little human creature.

An old man jumped off a ferryboat in New York harbor, leaving his money in Wall Street and a post card on the dock reading, "There is a sucker born for Wall Street every minute. I am one of them."

No gambler can win in Wall Street, Monte Carlo or anywhere else. A man won $500 on a $1 lottery ticket and asked his wife, "How shall we invest it?" Her reply was, "Buy five hundred more tickets." That's what gamblers do, always. The pendulum swings back and forth. Eventually it swings a little too far the wrong way. That ends them. They go over the side of the ferryboat.

Politicians, old and new style, tell you, "Don't talk about the Labor vote, there is no such thing. Some of their leaders talk between elections, but they line up on election day."

Employers of labor on a big

"SENIORITY"

What is this question of "seniority" that is being discussed in connection with the railroad strike?

All employees on railroads are accorded seniority of service, if otherwise competent. This means that the senior employees are entitled to choice of work, and when it becomes necessary temporarily to reduce forces that the junior men are released and the senior employees retained.

A strike was ordered by union officers who have no connection with any railroad. Many employees in compliance with the order quit their jobs and left the railroad service, and many did not leave but remained loyally at work, accepting the Government Labor Board decision.

There are thousands of such men who must, under the rules of fair dealing as well as the rules of seniority, be protected and supported. To discharge these men would be ingratitude of the grossest sort.

In addition to these thousands who remained in service, other thousands who wanted to work have been employed in good faith. The new employees in a great many cases left other employment with the understanding that if competent they would be retained in their present position.

These men—those who remained and those who enlisted—have kept the trains in operation, and the needs and comfort of the people supplied.

To now ask the railroads to set these loyal men aside and replace them with men who left, is to ask the railroads as well as the government, which is concerned through the action of the United States Railroad Labor Board, to be disloyal to these thousands of loyal men.

Charlestown Man Arrested in McMahon Case; Quizz and Free Lynn Man

Two more arrests were made today in the murder of twelve-year-old Henry McMahon of Salem.

One of the new suspects is William Derrick, forty years old. He was arrested by the Woburn police and said he lives at No. 1 Auburn street, Charlestown.

The other is a twenty-four-year-old youth of Lynn, known as Buckley. He was picked up by Sergeant George Rowe in West Lynn, and was taken to Salem to be questioned and exhibited to those who might be able to identify him. He is said to be mentally deficient.

Buckley was released after being questioned.

Derrick was taken into custody on information from the Burlington police. The latter say Derrick was loafing around that town for two days.

Army Officers Use Joss Sticks to Kill Harbor Smell

The odor from Spectacle Island was so oppressive today at army base, South Boston, that officers resorted to joss sticks to kill it.

Some officers bought camphor and worried through their duties by taking a whiff at this gum every few minutes. Several officers closed their windows and killed in part the odor by tobacco smoke.

CANTABRIGIAN SLAIN BY GIRL IN CAFE

Edward O'Connell of Cambridge was shot to death today by a girl. The shooting occurred in the heart of the theatrical section of Cleveland, O., following a quarrel in which another man was involved.

O'Connell was spending his vacation at Geneva-on-the-Lake, a Summer resort east of Cleveland.

A woman, who gave the name of Mrs. Mabel Barnett, is under arrest for the murder. With her was arrested Clifford Barnett, who said he was from Kansas City, Kansas.

Search of the dead man's effects at the morgue disclosed an unendorsed check, made out to "Edward Collins," and papers indicating the victim of the murder might be, in reality, either Collins or Thomas Connelly of Cambridge, Mass., with the name "O'Connell" made use of to cover up a night of high jinks in Cleveland resorts.

On the dead man's cuff links was engraved the name "Thomas Albert Connolly."

The shooting occurred under dramatic circumstances in Downing's restaurant on Euclid avenue. This is

Special Agents Dispatched to Investigate New England's Needs

Two special agents of the government, armed with broad powers, are due to arrive in Boston today. They are sent to protect New England industries from the effects of the priority orders on food and fuel. New England presents a distinct and peculiar problem in this respect. Chairman McCord of the Commerce Commission pointed out that New England produces no coal.

Washington reports indicate that the unique needs of the New England States are recognized by officials and that the two agents are authorized to act accordingly. The general order does not distinguish between New England and other sections east of the Mississippi, but because of its large industries this section will undoubtedly be given preference in the shipment of fuel. Assurances have been received that ways and means will be devised to pour into this district a fair quota of all freights necessary for its plants and marts.

This will include, under the order of the Commerce Commission:

Shipments of food for human consumption, feed for livestock, livestock, perishable products, coal, coke and fuel oil will be hauled ahead of other freights in the order of preference stated.

Lines hauling coal from mines, or supplying mines, shall transport empty cars for loading coal ahead of all other freights. Empty coal cars are to be returned promptly by all railroads.

The following users of coal are to be served in the order named:

1—Special purposes on demands of government.

2—Fuel for railroads and steamships, public utilities, hospitals, schools and quasi public utilities; all for current usage and not for storage.

3—Coal moving to the Great Lakes for use in domestic consumption.

4—Coal for general domestic distribution.

The order also provides that no coal shipped for any specific purpose under the priority ruling shall

O'BRIEN PUTS FILM BAN UP TO MAYOR

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien today carried the fight over the exhibition of the "dope" raid film to the doors of Mayor James M. Curley, who opposed the showing of the picture because he thought it was political propaganda for the re-election of O'Brien.

"Go ahead and exhibit the picture," was the advice of the District-Attorney to the makers of the film showing the seizure of opium layouts valued at $100,000 in Chinatown in the most spectacular and extensive raid ever staged in the United States.

Meanwhile, the official political relatives of the District-Attorney and His Honor are awaiting the next move from Mayor Curley, the gauntlet having been thrown down by the District-Attorney to him.

O'BRIEN FIGHTS BACK.

"If that picture is political propaganda, then I maintain that the picture of Governor Cox, who is seeking re-election to office, reviewing the troops at Camp Devens, is another case, and comes under the same category," declared the District Attorney.

Meanwhile the Shaw Photoplay Company, which made the film, affirms that the picture will be exhibited in Boston if they have to hang a screen on the streets and show it in open forum style.

IN FIGHTING MOOD.

In the rare fighting mood of the district attorney, when asked his opinion of Curley's proposed action in barring the film, O'Brien said:

"I'm sick of Curley's attitude toward me. I've told the makers of the film to exhibit it wherever they could and if a complaint follows then let's have the case threshed out before the full censor board. That picture was taken seven weeks before I officially announced my candidacy for election to the office of district attorney, which I now hold by appointment from the Governor.

"I am the district attorney holding office now. Whatever official acts I may do while in the office I am entitled to have recorded.

"If that picture is political and is distasteful to the Mayor or the theatre manager at whose houses it

OFFERED $100 BRIBE TO DIG SECRET GRAVE

Has Boston a community of nameless dead?

Thatcher K. Shaw, No. 99 Fuller street, Everett, caretaker of the Hebrew Burial Association of Everett, today told the Boston American that he was offered $100 if he would dig a grave for a body without a burial permit.

The incident occurred at about the same time that an unidentified body was buried without permit in the Jewish cemetery at Woburn.

Shaw intends to tell his story to District Attorney Leverett F. Saltonstall of Middlesex County.

The bribe of $100 mentioned by Shaw was offered to him the night of the terrific ice storm, November 26 last, which is about the time the unaccounted body in "Grave 2, Section 1," in the Montvale Cemetery at Woburn, was laid to rest.

Shaw's purpose in revealing his story is to protect the good name of the cemetery of which he is caretaker. He declares that when he refused the bribe of $100 the giver told him in Jewish to go to hell, and hurried away in an auto.

WAS OFFERED $100.

"I was leaving my house about 9:40 to go to work on the New Haven Railroad, where I was a fireman on one of the night runs," declared Shaw. "It was the night of the big ice storm.

"A machine drove up outside my house. Three men were in it, two in

RESTRAINT ORDER EXCEPTS PARKER

Judge Crosby Refuses to Name Temporary Receiver

An injunction restraining officers in the Henry V. Greene Companies from destroying, or concealing, transferring stock, or changing the present condition of any of the companies, was granted by Judge Crosby in Supreme Court today.

It was the first decision handed down in the famous $14,000,000 suit filed by attorneys for the Legal Aid Society on behalf of 60,000 investors in the former enda Jerkes's stock-selling corporations.

Judge Crosby refused to appoint a temporary receiver for the half-dozen companies involved in the famous suit.

In handing down the injunction, to stand until further order, it spoke not only to the corporations, but to officers and voting trustees, named in the suit, among them several men of national prominence. But, in granting the order, Judge Crosby excepted Herbert Parker, named with Sherman L. Whipple and others as defendants.

EXCEPTS PARKER.

In a memorandum Judge Crosby wrote: "The Commercial Finance Corporation, the Mutual Finance Corporation, the First Pupin Trust and the H. V. Greene Company, Inc., their officers, agents, trustees, voting trustees and attorneys and the individual defendants except Herbert Parker, their agents and attorneys are severally enjoined from destroying, concealing or making inaccessible the corporate and trust records, books of account and all other papers, files, documents or records

"The several defendants and their respective officers, attorneys, etc., are to be enjoined and restrained from bringing suit or otherwise attempting to enforce or collect any alleged claims of defendant organizations for any balance or balances claimed to be due from the plaintiffs and from other persons similarly situated, or from subscription contracts.

PAY NO DIVIDENDS.

"The Commercial Finance Corporation and the Mutual Finance Corporation, officers, trustees, attorneys, etc., are to be severally enjoined and restrained from paying any dividends on capital stock of said corporations or either of them, to any persons whatsoever.

"The individual defendants are restraining from transferring, causing or permitting the transfer of any stock or shares in any of the defendant corporations, trusts or organizations or otherwise changing the situation as it now exists, respecting holdings, ownership and control of stock.

"The prayers for the issuance of a temporary injunction, as hereinbefore expressly stated, are denied; the injunction is to stand until further order.

"An interlocutory decree is to be prepared and entered in conformity with the foregoing order."

In a separate order Judge Crosby denied an invocation for the appointment of a temporary receiver.

WHITNEY GAVE BATHING PARTY AT 3 A. M.

By EVAN BURROWS FONTAINE.

Broadway dancer and Ziegfeld Roof beauty who is suing Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney to have him declared the father of her child.

Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

Los Angeles, July 24.—We left off in my story yesterday at a point where "Laddie" Sanford was introducing Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney to me at the fashionable Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York the night of the magnificent "Bal Bleu" where I staged an original dance number at the personal request of "Sonny" Whitney's aunt, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

There is a splendid opportunity right here—as the words of the introduction were being spoken—for me to romance, to fictionize about this being a night of nights in my life.

I am very sorry to disappoint those who love the superlative when I confess that it was not such a thing.

It did not for the slightest emotional reaction when he murmured how pleased he was to meet me.

"MENTAL PU-EET."

I can, however, philosophize somewhat on this. How often do we hear about first impressions counting for so much. It's all a lot of silly twaddle. Take for example the two tragic examples that have come into my life. My marriage with Sterling Adair was one of those interested-at-first-sight affairs and it resulted disastrously.

Now, in direct contrast, take Sonny Whitney. He did not appeal to me at all. I did not dislike him, but I did not get that responsive emotion colloquially termed "a thrill."

I can well understand today, in light of Sonny's mischievous conduct toward me why he did not strike a responsive chord. He has no definite character of his own. Sonny Whitney is a second puppet. He was on the crew at Yale, but he could not row. Only his father's influence kept him there.

But still, in spite of all this, I fell in love with him, madly, desperately.

After Sonny was introduced we sat —that is, Betty Brown, the Ziegfeld Frolic girl; Laddie Sanford, Avery Young college chum of Sonny's, and myself—right in the party—went back into the Ritz. After supper was ordered Sonny asked me to dance.

"Well, at last he has met you," she said. "He has been pestering me for weeks to get him some charitable affair and ask you to dance so that he could be introduced to you."

CHAMPAGNE SERVED.

This was the first intimation I had had that the magnificent "Bal Bleu" was promoted by the whim of a rich man's son.

We had champagne during supper, not enough however to affect any member of the party. Sonny and Laddie felt happy though, and Laddie suggested we all go out to the country home of Sonny's father, the Harry Payne Whitney place at Westbury, and swim in the indoor plunge.

The hour was about 3 o'clock in the morning.

In the party were Dorothy Klever, a show girl; Lieutenant Johnson, an English aviator; Betty Brown and Laddie Sanford.

Sonny Whitney drove Laddie's car. Never before or never since have I seen a man who could drive a car like Sonny.

PARENTS NOT THERE.

I had naturally supposed that Sonny's parents were home. On reaching the Whitney residence at Westbury, however, I learned that they were away.

The swimming pool, I discovered, was an elaborate Roman bath in a specially constructed building back of the residence. In this building also is a tennis court.

Apparently it is a common custom to have bathing parties at the Whitney home for Sonny produced suits which fit us all.

We had a very happy time. I will tell you more about it tomorrow and also the first time Sonny Whitney kissed me and under circumstances which should indicate to any girl that these rich men's sons will spend unlimited money in pursuit of pleasure.

MARILYNN TO WED HER JACK ON SUNDAY

Los Angeles, July 24.—The date of the wedding of Marilynn Miller to Jack Pickford has been advanced from August 1 to July 30.

The announcement was made by Jack's mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, also mother of Mary Pickford, wife of Douglas Fairbanks.

Miss Miller arrived here yesterday and she and her fiance were discussing their plans for being married August 1, when Mrs. Pickford interrupted.

"No, they'll be married next Sunday—at 7 o'clock Sunday night—so there will be no interruptions in the picture work."

The wedding will be at Doug's and Mary's home in Beverly Hills.

"Alright," said Jack and Marilynn.

FAMILY SAVES MAN FROM JAIL TERM

Felix Ricci, No. 14 Arsenal street, Watertown, was arraigned in Waltham Court today, charged with having liquor in his possession and with the sale of it. He was fined $100 and given three months in the House of Correction. PUBLIC SHARES IN ESTATE OF RICH WOMAN

Bequests aggregating $150,000 in cash, in addition to other benevolent offerings, were included in the will of Miss Marriett S. Hazeltine of Croton, filed in Middlesex Probate Court today.

The bequests included part of the residue of the estate of the late Charles H. R. Hazeltine, a brother, who died several months ago. He left his property to the sister.

The bequests were made in two parts, one being from the estate of the brother and the other from the estate of the sister. Middlebury College was left $25,000. The Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary received $12,000, and Massachusetts General Hospital $12,500.

front, one in back. The man in the rear did the talking:

"'I will give you $25 to dig a grave for me,' he declared.

"'The usual price is only $8,'" replied Shaw.

"'But I have no permit, that is why I will make it $25,'" replied the stranger.

"'Can't do any business with me unless you have a permit,'" Shaw told him.

"'Make it a $100—any amount, so long as I can get rid of this body. All you will have to do is to dig the grave, and we will tend to putting the body in it,' replied the stranger.

Shaw refused.

"I had the good name of the cemetery, my wife and children to think of," declared Shaw. "So I refused. Upon this the stranger told me to go to hell and drove hurriedly up the street. I only wish I had noticed the number on the car, for I am sure it would today lead to the uncovering of many bodies that rest in cemeteries in Boston without burial permits.

SAW MRS. RIEL AND HURLEY IN BEDROOM

Bedroom scenes, in which Mrs. Frances A. Riel, an attractive brunette, and John J. Hurley, Sr., Revere Beach and Nantasket amusement promoter, are alleged to have figured, were described today in Suffolk Divorce Court by Joseph Carron of Revere.

Mrs. Riel and Hurley, married, and father of three boys, are charged with misconduct on twenty-two occasions by Mrs. Riel's husband, John J., a world war veteran, who is suing for divorce. Mrs. Riel, in a counter suit, accuses her husband of cruel and abusive treatment.

In his affidavit, read on the stand to him by Attorney Guy Scholl of Lynn, Hurley's counsel, Carron said:

"The night of January 21, 1921, I met John Siggins of Webster avenue, Chelsea. He called my attention to persons in a room on the second story of a house at No. 929 Broadway, Chelsea, owned and occupied by Mrs. Frances A. Riel. On this night Siggins was employed as a night watchman by the Perry Brick Company.

"After talking with Siggins I climbed a fence and stood on a pile of pug iron. I was able to see into the corner of a bedroom in the Riel home. I saw a man and woman. The woman I recognized as Mrs. Frances A. Riel. The man I afterward recognized as John J. Hurley, Sr."

Carron, who said he didn't read English, was asked by Attorney Newhall:

Q.—Did you know the affidavit was true when you signed it? A.—Yes.

Q.—How do you know what was in the paper that you signed? A.—I know what I said.

Q.—But you don't know what this paper says, do you? A.—No.

Q.—Was this paper read to you when you signed it? A.—Yes.

Q.—In English? A.—No, in French.

Q.—Who read it for you? A.—Mrs. Ayotte.

might be shown, then I maintain the pictures of Governor Cox reviewing the troops is in the same category."

"NO BAR," SAYS CITY HALL.

After this announcement City Hall, evidently receiving the full effect of the broadside, very quickly announced that it never was its intention to bar the film, as it had no power to bar any film merely because it was considered political propaganda.

City Censor John Casey, when interviewed after the O'Brien statement, declared:

"Neither the Mayor nor myself has power to bar a picture because it is political propaganda. All I did was to delete two scenes for the benefit of the public morals—one scene showing the preparation of the pipe of opium, and the other a scene showing girls, with short skirts, lying in the opium dens, puffing the pipes.

ABSOLVES MAYOR.

"Mayor Curley did not order the picture barred, but told the managers of the Boston Theatre, the exhibition of it would be distasteful to him. Rather than incur his displeasure, they decided not to show it, especially in view of the fact that they agreed among themselves some time ago not to display any picture of a political nature."

The Chinatown raid, which is portrayed in the picture, was made about six weeks ago by Federal agents operating under the direction of Dr. Erwin C. Ruth, head of the New England narcotic division of the Internal Revenue Department.

After the raid, Dr. Ruth notified District Attorney O'Brien of his great success. Together they had planned the raid and together they wished to view the results. At Ruth's office in the Federal building, the evening's haul was examined, and the officials were filmed.

LOU TELLEGEN CONFESSES HE STILL LOVES "GERRY" FARRAR

SAYS SHE IS GREAT ARTIST

Actor Charges His Wife Was Unfairly Treated by Opera Management

By FRED J. MelSAAC.

"How do you like all the publicity you've been getting about your difficulties with your wife, Geraldine Farrar?" was the blunt and rather impudent question I asked Lou Tellegen, as we chatted in his dressing room at Keith's.

Mr. Tellegen seemed to wince and a look of pain crossed his exceedingly mobile face.

"I don't like it. I'd rather not talk about it."

"Where is Mme. Farrar, just now?"

"I don't know. I haven't heard from her since our separation."

"Has she gone to Europe?"

STILL LOVES "GERRY."

"I can't tell you. I haven't seen anything about it in the newspapers and she has not communicated with me."

"Do you still love your wife?"

"Yes, I do, but it's not something I want to discuss. It's very painful to me."

"Despite my present unpopularity with my wife I have the highest regard for her. She is a very great artist. I wish her well.

"Don't you think it hard lines that she should lose her husband and her part of pre-eminence at the Metropolitan in a single year?"

Again Mr. Tellegen registered pain.

WILL PICK OWN PLAYS.

"It's nothing I can talk about, but I think that Mme. Farrar was unfairly treated at the Metropolitan, and I think she was glad to get out there. I feel sure she regrets leaving after fifteen years in the institution. She loved her operatic work."

"She loved motion pictures also," so she told me once."

Tellegen's face lighted up. "She did indeed. She told me that what she liked about it was the freedom to express herself without being imprisoned in musical measures. She loved the open air and the life in California.

"Did you like pictures?"

"Not so much. I prefer to play to audience.

"Do you think Mme. Farrar's appearances at your dramatic performances will be a success or will a leading man on the American stage?"

Mr. Tellegen apparently wished to say something but he swallowed and regained his discretion.

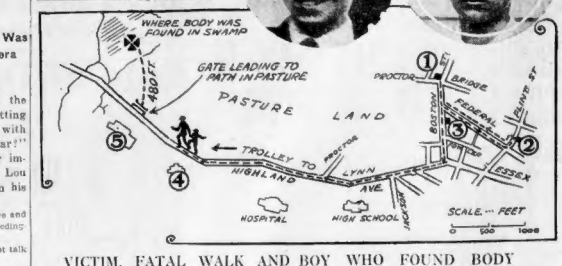
SALEM BOY AND HOW HE WENT TO DEATH



VICTIM, FATAL WALK AND BOY WHO FOUND BODY

Diagram shows as near as the police can check up the movements of the young McMahon boy from the time he left his home until his dead body was placed beneath a ledge of rocks off Highland avenue. (1) Home of the boy who lived on the second floor. First floor contained luncheon of Mrs. Margaret Lyons. He left this luncheon to go an errand for Mrs. Lyons at 2:30 p. m. (2) He appeared here, No. 54 Flint street, at home of Napoleon Perigny and asked for a boy chum. This was approximately 2:40 p. m. (3) This is the A. and P. store where at about 2:55 p. m. he came in and left milk bottle and 15 cents, saying he would be back later to get milk. (4) Home of Mrs. Margaret Crean, where at 3:30 p. m. he and her son Walter saw the boy and a strange man in blue suit and green cap walking down Highland avenue toward the place where the body was found. (5) Pig farm. Opposite this farm is the path through half mile pasture which leads to spot where boy was found dead, just 480 feet from the main road.

PHOTOS NEW MURDER CLEW

Apparently he had no destination and no reason for being in town.

Burlington police first notified Salem police of the man's presence and the Salem authorities told them to make an arrest. When officers went to find their man he had fled.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Officers Arthur Fay found him in Woburn and locked him up. Later the Salem police grilled a resident of Peabody and learned that he not given out. Although no formal charge was made against him, he was taken to Salem, to the home of Mrs. Margaret Crean, the person believed to have last seen Henry and the stranger walking with the killed lad.

DERRICK DENIES GUILT.

Derrick, the new suspect, was questioned by Chief McAuley of the Woburn police. He denied all connection with the crime. He said he had read the accounts of the murder in the newspapers.

According to the police, his assertions in some details have been conflicting. He is close to six foot tall, of sallow complexion and walks with a military bearing. Those are the outstanding items in the description given of the man last seen with young McMahon.

When arrested the man wore blue overalls, a blue coat and a cap.

He will be taken to Salem and subjected to inspection by persons who saw Henry on his fatal walk with the person who killed him.

WANTED BATHING SUIT.

Henry was lured to his death by promise of a new bathing suit. This is one of the theories the police have developed.

Several times on July 18, Henry pleaded with his mother, Mrs. Edward A. McMahon of No. 55 Boston street, for a bathing suit. He was eager for a bathing suit on the day he disappeared because there was a big picnic for children at Forest Park. But Henry's ma, mother of ten children, did not have the spare money that day.

It is thought that Henry may have confided his disappointment to the tall foreigner with whom he was seen and that the man induced the boy to go on a tramp through the fields and woods, and after attacking Henry, fiendishly killed him so that he could not figure as his accuser.

While City Marshal Edward O'Leary, Lieutenant Gideon Pelletier and State Detective Murray were busy trailing the neighbor suspect, fresh clews of the strange actions of men in deserted sections were received at police headquarters.

One which the police probed today was that furnished by Kenneth Porter of No. 169 Bridge street and his chum George Lemay of No. 22 Bridge street.

They discovered a cache yesterday where a foreigner with a shotgun had buried on the previous day a large assortment of articles including a tin type of a soldier and what appears to be a photograph. The features of the soldier had been deliberately scraped away with a knife or pin. The features of the boy are clear.

The police are anxious to learn the identity of this boy in order to clear up a very puzzling development which may have much or nothing to do with the McMahon tragedy. From the hour Henry's body was discovered the Salem authorities have painstakingly sifted every clew submitted to them.

Kenneth Porter, a lad of seventeen, gave history of the cache in the woods as follows:

"Shortly after 1 o'clock Monday afternoon I was tramping through the woods on the farm next to Thomas Farm. I pushed through thick growth of bushes and came to a steep rock down which I half slid and ran. When I reached the bottom I saw within a few feet of me a man crouched. He seemed to be digging or scraping.

MAN POINTED GUN.

"Angered by my presence, he snatched up a shotgun, leveled it and shouted, 'Get out of here quick or I'll shoot.' And I went for all I was worth. I didn't need any second invitation. It happened so suddenly and he looked so mad I thought every second I'd hear the report of his shotgun, but he didn't fire.

"Well, I told my father I was coming again Tuesday to see what that fellow was burning in the woods. George Lemay came with me. When we reached the same spot we were cautious because it's awful lonely there. Seeing no one George and I searched on our hands and knees all over the place. I found this handkerchief which has cuts in it like eyes and a nose. It may have been used as a mask. That's what Lieutenant Pelletier thought.

"George Lemay was poking the pine needles with a stick where we found the articles. The first thing he knew he came upon a small bundle. It was wrapped in a newspaper dated July 15, but it wasn't wet, nor were the contents of the bundle, showing that it had been put there recently.

"We tore open the bundle. This picture of a soldier and a flag fell out. Wonder why anybody would want to go to the trouble of burying that? Then there was this red accordion milk tin. It's a high grade tin and this side is new-looking, but this side is freshly torn, as if someone grabbed it and tugged it off the owner in a fight.

"Then there was a piece of white linen which looks as if it was part of a shirt sleeve, and another handkerchief and a stiff linen cuff, the right cuff, almost new. See, it's size 9½ and cost 25 cents and the stamp of the maker is as clear as if it was just bought. That's a new cuff and there are candle drips on it. They were all wrapped up together, the tin and cuff and the tintype.

Seven men held in the "Blackhand" murder of Michael Scarpone, shot to death on January 26, went on trial today in Superior Court. They are charged with first degree murder. They occupied three iron cages in the courtroom.

Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro, addressing the jury, described the crime and told how Scarpone had received several "shakedown" letters threatening death unless he paid money to the writers. Scarpone turned the letters over to the police. Death followed. Scarpone was shot down while on his way to work from his home in Unity street. He was employed as a laborer on the postoffice building. He was thirty-two years old and had a wife and two children.

Counsel was assigned to each of the prisoners. H. E. Lawler represents Domenic Monterno, J. J. Zottoli appears for Salvatore Tornamel, T. J. Grady for Antonio Mascetti, Felix Forti for Joseph Rimboli, William T. McCarthy for Luigi de Padova, Joseph L. Vecchioni for Giuseppe Amardo and P. C. Bovre for Francisco Toscano.

BROOKLINE GIRL WED SECRETLY

When Miss Marjorie Jenkins, Brookline artist's model, promised to marry Hurstfal Fresse of Canton, Ohio, she made up her mind to marry him quietly and secure parental blessing and approval later.

Accordingly, her many friends and acquaintances in Greater Boston were surprised when she suddenly informed them that she is now Mrs. Fresse.

Miss Jenkins, who has won a number of prizes in beauty contests here and in the Middle West, went with Fresse, who is a Rummer school student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to Judge Forbes of the Third District Court, Cambridge, for a waiver of the five-day law.

Then they hurried over to Brookline Town Hall, got a marriage license and moved along to Fresse's apartments at the Riverbank Court, Cambridge, where the Rev. Hudson of the Unitarian Church of Brookline, performed the ceremony.

Then the news broken to the bride's father, Mr. James G. Jenkins, of No. 8 Brewster terrace, Brookline. His blessing was forthcoming.

A telegram was sent to the parents of Mr. Fresse in Canton. The father of the young man is a manufacturer.

They went to Maine on their honeymoon.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. James A. Garland, jr., whose husband is a brother of Charles A. Garland, the youthful North Carver idealist who recently gave $300,000 to a group of Greenwich Village social experimenters.

CAPITAL PLOTS UNIONS' DEATH, BORAH SAYS

(Copyright, 1922, by International News Service.)

Washington, July 26.—Destruction of union labor, deliberately planned by capital upon the termination of the World War was declared by Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, today to be the fundamental, underlying cause of the existing coal and railroad situation.

Senator Borah recalled that he had charged when he fought the last army appropriation bill that the "real danger of a big military establishment" was that capital hoped and expected to employ it against union labor.

"Recent developments certainly seem to justify the view I took of a large army then and which I still hold," Borah added.

"One reason certain business interests supported and encouraged the Presidential aspirations of General Leonard Wood in 1920 was that they were confident if he were elected to the White House, he would place a batallion of soldiers at the doorway of union labor wherever and whenever those interests deemed the use of armed force necessary to crush union labor."

"In its determination to crush union labor, capital started out as soon as the World War was finished to deflate wages, to slash them irrespective of whether they were reduced below the level of the 'living wage' or not," Borah continued.

Unions Block Separate R. R. Strike Settlements

Chicago, July 26.—Refusal of grand chiefs of the Shopmen's Union to sanction agreements between individual boards and their employes was holding up settlement of the shopmen's strike on a score of railroads today. Irrespective of what terms might be reached the union leaders are insisting that any peace agreement must apply to all roads of the country.

President Jewell of the railway employes' department is convinced the strike cannot be won unless the men stick together. Not less than thirty roads, it is reported, could reach terms with their men along lines prescribed in the decision of the United States Labor Board if the grand chiefs would give permission.

Incidents during which four revolver shots were fired, broke out near the shops of the Illinois Central railroad at Burnside today. The riot occurred as Paul Blake, a non-union mechanic, was stopped on his way to work by a group of strikers. Fifteen policemen restored order.

Both Sides Cheerful at Baltimore Conference

Baltimore, July 26.—Although neither officials of the Chesapeake & Ohio nor representatives of their striking shopmen would comment on the situation prior to resuming their conference today, there was no attempt to conceal their cheerfulness.

The railroad company was represented as acting entirely alone in the matter. One high official was reported as declaring that "we want a peaceful settlement of this strike for the Baltimore & Ohio, no matter what the other roads may want."

Railroads Merged Into One Gigantic System

By International News Service.

Washington, July 26.—The nation went back to war-time regulation of the railroads today, when by order of the industrial chaos brought on by the paralyzing rail and coal strikes appeared almost as far distant as ever.

For all practical purposes the railroads of the country with their 250,000 miles of tracks were merged into one gigantic system today, with interchangeable equipment and operating under orders to move food and fuel above all else. The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its broad powers derived from the transportation act, became overnight a miniature railroad administration empowered to suspend all rules and regulations and to enforce its fuel and food carrying orders under heavy penalties.

Resuming the conference through which he proposes to keep in close contact with the railroad strike situation, President Harding conferred today with W. W. Atterbury, vice-president in charge of operations of the Pennsylvania railroad, Secretary Hoover also participated in the conference.

The national emergency declared by the commission and the priority ratings accorded shipments of fuel and food on all railroads, will, government officials believe, reduce public suffering and inconvenience to the minimum, while at the same time affording the government a breathing spell to figure on new methods of settling the strikes.

That the action through the Interstate Commerce Commission is only a poultice and not a cure was generally recognized by administration officials. There were many indications today that the government contemplates any immediate steps in the direction of restoring peace in either the rail or coal strikes.

In the rail strike, President Harding still considers that the burden of responsibility rests with the Railway Labor Board. It was reiterated at the White House today.

U. S. SENDS STRIKE AGENTS TO NEW ENGLAND

be reshipped for any other purpose. The priority order on foods and fuels applies to the railroads east of the Mississippi River. A separate order directs all the railroads in the United States to move traffic over the most direct routes.

The priority order information is based largely on a belief in the ability of the special agents to function. But foodstuffs, livestock and fuel will be rushed in sufficient quantities without regard to other freight.

FEAR EFFECT ON MILLS.

Meanwhile, men high in the commercial life of the community, predict the shutdown of the fundamental industrial plants of all New England States unless raw materials can be moved swiftly.

That the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission assuming control of railroad facilities in the name of the Federal government for the moving of foodstuffs and fuel is necessary as an emergency measure is asserted. The health and even life of the community are dependent upon it.

WOULD CLOSE FACTORIES.

But it is also pointed out that continued withholding of raw materials will result in the closing of factories with the inevitable result—the casting into idleness of thousands of wage earners.

Upon issuance of the order by the Commerce Commission President Hustis of the Boston & Maine stated:

"The situation is indeed serious. Foodstuffs and fuel must be given the right of way. Raw materials necessary for the upkeep of our industries will have to await the movement of the necessaries of life.

"What effect this will have on our industries in New England I am not prepared to state. But one thing is certain, food and fuel will be moved first, and the Federal government orders. The railroads will obey and act on orders in this crisis."

Frederic S. Snyder, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and head of the Batchelder & Snyder Provision Company, in a statement to an American reporter, said:

"The directors of the Chamber will meet today and will discuss this new situation as it affects the life of our industries. Business has been subjected to its roots by the rail strike. This new development, although absolutely necessary, will cause our great industries to face a crisis."

URGES ARBITRATION.

"The existence of many industries hangs on a thread and a dearth of raw materials would cripple many and close others." This would result in laying off of men and women and the further complicating of the already dire situation existing.

"The only solution, or course, is compulsory arbitration of the rail strike. Business men are forbidden to conspire for profit, and no group of men should be allowed to hold the destinies and the commercial life of a nation in their grasp to do with as they will.

Threaten Strike of 400,000 Trackmen

Detroit, July 26 (By the Associated Press).—A threat that the 400,000 maintenance men employed on the nation's railroads will go on strike because of alleged action of certain Eastern roads in attempting to form company associations to take the place of international railroad brotherhoods and the action of guards employed by the railroads was made here today at headquarters of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Railway Shop Laborers.

Chicago, July 26.—E. F. Grable, president of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way employes and railway shop laborers, today denied reports emanating from his headquarters at Detroit that the 400,000 members of the union again were threatening to strike.

Forty Women Attack Non-Union Shopmen

Toledo, O., July 26.—Forty women, wives and relatives of striking railway employes, attacked a party of non-union railroad shopmen on their way to work in the Fearing street shops of the New York Central Railroad today.

Police were met with a shower of bricks which resulted in calls for reserves.

Three patrol wagons, filled with officers, were rushed to the scene with orders to arrest every woman found in the vicinity.

B. & M. Workers Suspect Board

Following two conferences with Boston & Maine representatives, Vice-President G. H. Planton of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way and Track Laborers expressed suspicion of the motives of the management.

"It is impossible to get any real information as to the manner in which the United States Labor Board intends to handle our appeal," he declared. "Unofficially we learn that the railroad executives intend to collect a lot of information and present it for consideration merely for the purpose of blocking our efforts and delaying the board's decision.

"We have proven that our cut in wages was an injustice and we will show that by the cutting off of overtime pay for the ninth and tenth hours, the working day was extended in violations of the law."

AVERT WALKOUT AT NOVA SCOTIA MINES

Sydney, N. S., July 26.—The walkout of the coal miners of Nova Scotia has been averted, at least until August 15, through the trimmers and shippers of International pier accepting an increase from $21 to $31 from the Dominion Coal Company as a wage scale base.

The new agreement is to stand until August 15, the date on which the executive officers of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, have declared a Nova Scotia coal mine strike will be called if 1921 rates are not restored.

IRISH REBELS BATTLE IN DUBLIN

Dublin, July 26 (By International News Service.)—Activities on the part of the Republican irregulars have been steadily increasing in this city during the past twenty-four hours. There were bomb outrages in the centre of the city. Revolver and rifle fire was almost continuous. Seven persons were arrested as snipers. The situation throughout southern Ireland continues favorable for Free State troops.

The Lord Mayor of Cork is heading a delegation to Dublin which will attempt to bring about an armistice. They will propose that the new Dail Eireann form a "peace committee" to work out the terms of settlement between the rebels and the Free Staters. Members of the Irish provisional government said that the resignation of George Gavin Duffy as foreign minister would not alter the strong policy of Michael Collins.

Collins is determined to "clean up" Ireland once for all.

POPE MAKES NEW PLEA FOR RUSSIANS

Rome, July 26 (By International News Service).—A letter written by Pope Pius XI., appealing to the whole world to aid the starving Russians, was made public today. The Pontiff commended the splendid response of the United States to the early appeals, declaring that America had "gained recognition of all humanity." A high tribute was paid to the American Congress for voting large sums for Russian assistance.

The fire is believed to have been caused by an oil stove explosion.

LENROOT WOOL PROPOSITION UP TODAY

By the Associated Press.

Washington, July 26.—The first test of strength in the Senate on the Lenroot proposition to reduce the proposed tariff duties on coarse wool and manufactures thereof was expected today.

Leaders of the Republican agricultural-tariff bloc, and other opponents of the suggested change, believed they would muster a safe majority against it. They counted upon at least seven votes from the Democratic side.

The pending amendment would limit to sixty per cent. ad valorem the maximum duties on carpet wools. Should it be rejected, the fight for lower duties would not end there, Senator Lenroot proposing to offer a similar amendment to the second raw wool paragraph, which embraces rates on the finest as well as the lowest grade wools used for other than the making of carpets.

At the same time, Democratic leaders plan to continue their fight on the duties proposed. They have announced their support of the Lenroot proposal, but they have and will urge cuts all along the line in the wool schedule.

Blueberry Moonshine Lures Woburn Man to Lawrence

Lawrence, July 26.—The fame of Stanley Ziak's "blueberry moonshine" called Michael Carroll from as far away as Woburn to this city and is claimed to have induced him to stay here, according to a story told in court.

"The stuff was enough to set a man crazy," Carroll told Judge J. J. Mahoney, "and I spent a fortune on it." After he had been refused a drink Carroll came to the police station and said he was one of Ziak's best customers and wanted the place closed up so that he would not be tempted again.

Carroll promised the judge he would not touch it again, but told the court he knew a lot of other places if he grew thirsty again. Ziak was fined $200 for illegal keeping.

BLIND MAN, 74, INVENTS AUTO THIEF LOCK

DIAGRAM ON PICTURE PAGE.

Seventy-four years old and blind for the last twenty years, Daniel C. Fisher has perfected a lock which he claims will defy any automobile thief. And Mr. Fisher only rode in an auto once in his life.

Since he went blind Mr. Fisher has invented and perfected a carding feeder that is used in woolen worsted mills from Boston to Bombay. He has three others that will be on the market soon, with patents either allowed already or applied for.

One is his automobile locking system, which consists of a lock on the dashboard of the car. The mere insertion and turn of a key in the lock shuts off the gasoline between the carburetor and the vacuum tank. To be used with this lock is a hood lock which prevents the thief from lifting the hood of the car to get at the gas line.

MAKES NUTS IMMOVABLE.

Another invention is a lens grinder which he claims is the only one perfected which will grind accurately two lenses on one piece of glass of any curve or magnifying power.

The third invention is a nut-lock to lock the nuts on bolts. It consists simply of two threads on the nut, one of which turns to the right and one to the left. When the two parts of the nut are arranged, the nut can be turned, when disarranged no power on earth can move the nut.

This invention is to be used on freight couplers, where it will prevent the uncoupling of cars, such as caused the freight wreck on the Boston & Maine at Scarboro recently.

Now let us introduce Mr. Fisher to you. A gentle, kindly old fellow, with eyes that seem to see you even if they don't. His grandfather fought with Ethan Allen in the Continental Army. His father was a natural mechanic.

IDEAS AFTER MIDNIGHT

"But I'm no mechanic myself, at least by natural inclination. Call it force of circumstance" says Mr. Fisher. His wife, Carrie A. Fisher smiled. "I go at a mechanical problem like I'd take a dose of salts."

"They usually just come to him between twelve and four in the morning" added Mrs. Fisher.

"I've been a mechanic since 1861 when I started work in a woolen mill" continued the inventor. "I guess I was a mechanic so long that I just got wheels in my head. And all those wheels with what mechanical bent I inherited from my father accounts for what I have done I assume.

"I learned the woolen business all the way through and now my carding feeder is used in nearly every factory in the country. I get the credit for it. Somebody else gets the money. I never did have any luck when it came to getting money for what I invented, and I've been inventing since 1892.

"Just at present instead of marking time I am treading water, waiting for some one to back this newest thing. Maybe I'll be a million aire yet.

"And I may be in to see you soon. A specialist tells me there is a cataract on one eye and an operation may give me the sight of that back."

scale tell you, "in the long run no need to worry about Labor. Workingmen do not stick together."

You read that British coal miners will not help American coal miners on strike. Mr. Lewis, head of the miners, thought British workmen would supply no coal for shipment to this country. On the contrary, British workmen say they will supply two million tons per month, which, of course, means helping to break the strike.

Judge Gary says good crops will save the day in this country, in spite of bad conditions, strikes, etc. He also believes that the wonderfully promising crops of Russia will stop starvation there and help put the Russian government and people on their feet. Unlike some foolish individuals that bought the Czar's bonds and couldn't collect, Judge Gary knows that the whole world is interested in the welfare of Central and Eastern Europe. Civilization can't live half dead and half alive.

The French government puts a luxury tax on wines. Frenchmen of the Bordeaux region, whence come the Lafite, Larose, Mouton, Rothschild, etc., parade, led by Senators and Deputies. They say wine is not a luxury, but a necessity of life. Over here, we say it is a poison, and you musn't drink it, tax or no tax.

Quite a difference of opinion.

This country asks England to help us be pure, good, non-alcoholic. We request permission to search British ships outside the three-mile limit, that we may seize rum contraband. We also ask Canada to protect us.

Canada and England will probably say, "You are more than sixteen years old. If you don't want to drink, DON'T DRINK. It isn't our affair."

VINEYARD HAVEN TO HONOR WAR HEROES

Vinyard Haven, July 26.—A big welcome awaits Major General and Mrs. C. P. Edwards when they arrive here tomorrow. The townspeople will have several fetes in their honor. The General will dedicate the big bowlder in the centre of the town, memorializing the seventy young men who took part in the World War.

HASTY PUDDING SHOWCOMPOSER GOING ABROAD

When the Paris Conservatory of Beaux Arts, department of music reopens this season it will have enrolled as a pupil Alexander L. Steinert of Boston, who composed most of the last two Hasty Pudding shows and whose compositions for orchestra and songs have revealed a remarkable talent.

Alexander L. Steinert.

Alexander Steinert is only 21 years old, but already his compositions have been played by such musicians as Corot, Schmidt, Grainger and Grebhard, while his songs have been performed by Frieda Hempel, Margaret Matzenauer, Eva Gautier and others.

Young Steinert graduated a few weeks ago from Harvard "magna cum laude." He maintained his standing in his regular studies and managed to compose such works as "Mirage," "Zahi," and "Impromptu" during his spare time. The tinkling tunes for the Hasty Pudding show he did not consider seriously at all, but they won high praise for their melodies. His ambition is to be a composer and orchestral conductor.

Mr. Steinert comes of a musical family. He is the son of Alexander Steinert, head of the musical firm of M. Steinert Sons, and a number of his relatives have made their mark in music.

OFFICIAL MILK PROBE IN BOSTON

Boston is to conduct an investigation into the excessive prices charged for milk.

This became known today when District-Attorney O'Brien sent Edward L. Pride, an expert accountant, to the office of the New England Milk Producers' Association, No. 81 Cornhill. Mr. Pride carried a letter from Mr. O'Brien, asking that he be given access to the books of the association.

MAN SLAIN IN CAFE BY GIRL

one of the few all-night places in the city. Early morning diners noticed that O'Connell and Barnett were quarreling. The girl, who is strikingly pretty, suddenly drew a revolver and fired three times into O'Connell's body.

She was shrieking in hysteria when the police arrived and took her and her companion into custody.

SEEK ESCAPE IN AUTO.

An attempt on the part of the couple to escape in a limousine, bearing the Texas license 689091, was frustrated by guests of the restaurant.

The woman insisted that Barnett was her husband and that their home is in Dallas, Tex. He denied this.

"I'm a salesman, traveling out of Kansas City," Barnett told the police. "I met this woman for the first time yesterday afternoon."

The girl broke down when he made this statement, and sobbed:

"I didn't do it! Why don't you ask him? Charge me with murder? Go ahead! What do I care! I've got tuberculosis anyway, and I'll be dead before you can try me."

Efforts to get her to make a further statement was met with the reiterated statement:

"I didn't do it. Ask him."

Barnett said:

"This woman is only a passing acquaintance. I entered the restaurant with her and as we sat down at a table O'Connell's hand hit my face by accident. We started an argument, and all of a sudden O'Connell pulled a gun. I knocked it out of his hand. She picked it up."

Auto in Death Case Owned by Texas Woman

Dalas, Texas, July 26.—The automobile license number 689,091, mentioned in dispatches from Cleveland in connection with a row in a restaurant there in which one man was killed, is shown in the lists of State Highway Department as belonging to Mrs. Clara M. Champion, residing at the Jefferson Hotel, Dallas.

The register at the Jefferson Hotel shows no Mrs. Champion, although a Mr. Champion checked out there Tuesday, giving no address.

JUDGE REFUSES TO BAR PROXY VOTES

Petition of Edmund D. Codman for an injunction to prevent the counting of a block of proxy votes for directors at the annual meeting of the Boston & Maine Railroad was denied by Judge John C. Crosby of the Supreme Court today. The votes had been secured by a stockholders' committee. Codman had claimed that there was a scheme for the New York Central Railroad to get control of the Boston & Maine, and for President Smith of the New York Central to be elected chairman of the board of directors of the Boston & Maine.

A Few Days Ahead of Time

Next week we will begin the Furniture event which for as far back as many old friends of the store can remember has stood out in New England as the best opportunity to buy Furniture—the quality of which can be depended upon—and to save money.

This occasion is known as

White's August Furniture Sale

In accordance with our long established custom we give this advance notice. And at the same time call attention to the

"3 Days of Privilege"

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday

So many items in the sale consist of only "one-of-a-kind" greatly reduced, that this advance opportunity is especially appreciated by those who like to secure prize bargains.

Purchases will be held 60 days on request—upon payment of a deposit

OFFICERS DODGE LIVE SHELLS AT DEVENS

Camp Devens, July 26.—Reserve officers of the Ninety-fourth Division had some of the thrills of going through a real battle when the Seventh United States Field Artillery commenced firing live three-inch shells over their heads as they were working out a tactical problem.

Many of the reserve officers are World War veterans and they made light of the experience, but the "rookie" officers have been furnished with a topic of conversation for months to come.

Wins Beauty Prize

ELVA LLOYD.

THOMAS HEAD OF PRODUCING MANAGERS

Augustus Thomas, dramatist and actor, has been elected executive chairman of the Producing Managers' Association.

In the realm of the legitimate, this post is analogous with that of Mr. Hays in the movie industry and Judge Landis in baseball.

It makes Mr. Thomas a court of last resort and a Moses of show business. The contract the Producing Managers' Association has with the Actors' Equity Association will expire soon and trouble will ensue. That is one of the reasons why Mr. Thomas has been given this post, which carries with it a huge salary and large powers.

The association has a membership of fifty-three, including most of the important American theatrical producers. Those who are not members of the P. M. A. are members of the Actors' Fidelity Association, the organization which George M. Cohan sponsored during the actors' strike.

Mr. Thomas is one of the best known personages in the world of the theatre.

HYDE PARK BOARD OF TRADE OUTING

Chanting the matchless song of songs—one keg of cheer among the four of us—two hundred members of the Hyde Park Board of Trade, in motor convoy, left today for their twenty-sixth annual outing at Pembroke. A gala day of sports, contests, and entertainment, ending with a baseball game between the married and single men is the program for the day.

WATCH BOSTON FOR CUBAN RUM SMUGGLERS

Boston is a port for rum smuggling from Cuba, if the suspicions of Prohibition Enforcement Officer Elmer C. Potter is correct.

"I suspect that liquor is being smuggled into Boston from Cuba and other tropical ports. Of course, I can say nothing of a definite nature on this matter," said Mr. Potter in discussing the activities of the United States government in trying to stop rum smuggling from the tropics.

"I will not even use the old phrase, 'We expect to make an important arrest soon,' but you can rest assured that we are watching the local situation closely and something may drop, some day."

The United States has approached Great Britain in an effort to secure co-operation in suppressing rum smuggling along the Atlantic Coast.

That Canada is also under discussion is shown by the fact that the subject is being handled through the British Embassy here and the American Embassy in London. The matter has also been taken up with Mexican and Cuban officials.

FIREMEN SAVE 14 WOONSOCKET CHILDREN

Woonsocket, July 26.—Fourteen children and their parents were carried down ladders in night attire from a burning four-tenement dwelling today at a $35,000 blaze in a wool storage house adjoining the building.

When firemen arrived the blaze had leaped from the warehouse to the tenements. Lives of sleeping occupants were endangered by flames and heavy smoke from the burning wool.

A ladder hooked to a third-story window of the warehouse became unhooked and slid sideways toward the ground. Horseman Joseph Leduc clung to a window ledge, but Horsemen Barton and Lemieux were thrown to the ground and badly hurt. They were taken to Woonsocket Hospital. Leduc was rescued by brother firemen.

PHONE OPERATORS SCORE RIVAL UNION

At a meeting of representatives of the telephone unions still affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, a statement, signed by Miss Annie E. Molloy, president of the Boston Telephone Operators' Union, was adopted contradicting claims of the International Brotherhood of Telephone Workers that many members are quitting the old organization for the new.

Miss Annie E. Molloy.

Miss Julia S. O'Connor, president of the telephone operators' department of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, made a bitter attack on the Brotherhood of Telephone Workers and attributed their claims to an attempt to bolster up the fast waning interest in that organization.

NEW PLAN TO END LAWRENCE STRIKE

Lawrence, July 26.—Hope is entertained that the Lawrence strike may be tentatively settled as a result of a new step being taken by the state board of arbitration. A conference between the board and representatives of the United Textile Workers will be held next week, according to Organizer Francis Gorman. Union heads say the mills offer a short week schedule as the alternative of the pay cut. About 700 pickets daily picket the Pacific Mills.

MRS. MANSFIELD SAYS HUSBAND MUST REDEEM HIMSELF

FAITHFUL TO MAN FREED

Wife of Suspect Discharged in Jones Murder Charge Breaks Silence

By GRACE DESCHAMPS.

"Most women are good." Blinking back tears that she insisted were just tears of happiness because the man whom she had never ceased to love had emerged from the shadow of a murder charge, Mrs. George H. Mansfield, wife of the man released in connection with the death of Alice Jones in a South End apartment, spoke today for the first time since she was told that her husband had been accused.

Falteringly, hesitatingly, because she has been "framed" in interviews she has never given and because she has suffered at the hands of unscrupulous persons, Mrs. Mansfield told her story.

"Most women ARE good," she repeated again, as though to challenge those who would wag an accusing tongue at the name of the dead woman who had stolen her husband's love and nearly his life.

NO BITTERNESS.

It seemed an irrelevant way to begin her story.

"But if you're going to tell my story," she explained, "please don't tell people I have any bitterness toward Alice Jones. I guess she couldn't help being what she was —but all women aren't that way.

"Most women don't drink and very few of them ever think of any man but their own. Just because that poor dead woman slipped up, somewhere—that doesn't mean that most women aren't good."

Having thus excused the woman who had wrecked her life—and vindicated her sex—Mrs. Mansfield continued.

"When I learned that the police thought my husband a murderer, it seemed as though I should suffocate. My husband! a man who had never been anything but a warm-hearted, weak-willed boy. If I could only have made the police understand that George could not kill anything! He could drink and he could forget his wife, perhaps, but he couldn't be cruel.

"I never loved my husband more than in those awful dark days that followed. I could not go to him and I could not bring myself to participate in one of those scenes so often staged in public between husband and wife, but I wanted to go to George and shake his hand and tell him that the boys and I knew he wasn't guilty.

"I went to his lawyer and told him that the boys and I were willing to do anything in our power to aid Mr. Mansfield. They said we 'heaped scorn' upon him, but that wasn't true. We were always with him, just as we're with him now in his fight for regeneration.

"George is coming back to the boys and me—not now, but sometime, maybe years from now. He is going to fight his fight alone and when he has won, he is coming back. It may take a long time, maybe years, but I now he will do it. He is only thirty-nine and there is much of life ahead of him.

"Somewhere in future—maybe it's a long way off, too—I think I am going to be happy.

"I don't blame my husband for the tragedy that has overtaken him. I was older than he, I never was well and I may not always have inspired him with a real love for me.

"Mrs. Jones occupied the first floor, several years ago, right beneath us. She invited my husband down to her apartment every evening, and when he didn't respond to her first invitation, she came up and rang the bell until he did go down.

"If a visitor came to see my husband and I sent one of the boys downstairs after him, the children would describe how Mrs. Jones clung to my husband when he rose to leave. She was infatuated with him and he was infatuated with liquor. She gave him liquor and he forgot even his manhood.

"Even after Mrs. Jones moved away—and my husband went too, I knew he'd come back to us some day. I never thought it would be under the present circumstances, but I thought he'd tire of the life he was living and long for his home and children again.

MUST FIGHT OWN WAY.

"I couldn't take George back now, even though I love him. It wouldn't be fair to him or to me. We will help him, the boys and I, but he must get up on his own feet. He has a lawyer's bill ahead of him and he has no money. The life he led took all he earned.

"I went to see his lawyer yesterday afternoon to make plans for his fight and perhaps to see George, too. The lawyer told me that my husband would be a free man at 4 o'clock. It seemed like the awakening from a bad dream. I waited until George came. There were many people about and our thoughts remained unspoken. My husband ventured to raise his head to me and I held out my hand. He took it and clung to it like a little boy who has wandered for a long time and has just found his mother again.

"I felt more like a mother to him than a wife. I think every woman must feel that way toward an erring husband. What are they, anyway, but boys, the best of them? Just little boys who will never grow up, nor get old. I guess it's just the women who do that."

Mrs. Cochrane a "Peppy" Society Player, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

MRS. A. LYNDE COCHRANE

(Photo by Bachrach)

Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane (Vivian Wessel), is considered by many as one of Boston society's six "peppiest" young women. Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane are spending the Summer at Pride's Crossing, where they are prominent members of the Summer colony.

MRS. ROCHFORT Y. LOVEBAND (Mary Sigourney).
Miss Polly Cabot.
Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane (Vivian Wessel).

"Why, she's one of the liveliest persons I ever knew," said one party when I suggested Vivian Cochrane as being one of the six "peppiest" young women of Boston's fashionable contingent. And so I put her down on my list, along with Mrs. Rochfort Y. Loveband (Mary Sigourney) and Polly Cabot, leaving three more still to be named.

The Cochranes are spending the Summer at their estate in Pride's Crossing, and many a hostess of the North Shore Summer colony counts upon the former Vivian Wessel's presence to enliven her dinner party, or bridge, or dance, or whatever the occasion may be.

Everyone, of course, remembers Mrs. Cochrane as "Polly Peters," the charming little heroine of "Why Not," written by Adelaide Whitman and given last March by society folk in aid of the Infants' Hospital. What a very demure young person "Polly Peters" was and what a lot of applause she and "Bob Brewer"—played by George Peabody Gardner, Jr.—aroused by their rendering of "Why Not," the song hit of the show. Do you remember the altogether fetching little curtsey which "Polly" made at the end of the song?

ABOUT five years ago all Boston society considered Alexander Lynde Cochrane, noted clubman and Harvard '93 man, a confirmed bachelor. That was until a little New York maiden known as Vivian Wessel entered the scene. During Miss Wessel's college career she had taken the leading part in no end of amateur theatricals, and it was not long before she was really and truly on the stage.

But her career as a professional was not to last long, for as soon as the prominent Boston society man made his entrance, Vivian Wessel decided that the stage was not the only means to happiness. And so, just four days after their engagement was announced, the couple were married in New York city at the West End Reformed Church. The bride was given away by her father, Charles Wessel, and the groom's parents came on to Gotham for the occasion.

Incidentally, the former Vivian Wessel isn't the "stagey" looking girl. She is a rather small person, with soft, wavy brown hair, which she wears very simply, parted in the middle. She has laughing eyes and a laughing mouth, which give one a hint of her vivacity.

The last time I saw her she was moving about in meteor-like flashes at "Princemere" when the polo tournament was given there recently. She was in charge of the tea tables, and I noted the tact and kindliness with which she persuaded a bashful group of sailors—part of the detachment sent from the Navy Yard for the day—to partake of some tea and cakes.

FOR those of the Summer colony along the North Shore who are devotees to tennis, this is indeed a week of weeks. For everyone is either taking part in, or attending the Monserrat tennis tournament, which closes tomorrow with a tea at the clubhouse in charge of Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno of Beverly Cove.

Among the young women who have entered in the ladies' singles are the Misses Miriam Fenno, Betty Forrest, Sabra Hood, Frances Weld, Nancy and Lucy Carnegie, Anne Mann, Emily and Jean Sears, Mabel and Harriet Rantoul, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, 2nd, Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr. (Phyllis Sears), and her sister, Mrs. Bayard Warren, Mrs. Robert Haydock and the Marchesa Ferranti.

Miss Joan Whitney, daughter of the Payne Whitneys of New York, who are spending several months at the Shore, is numbered also among the entrants, as is her cousin, Miss Barbara Whitney, the daughter of the Harry Payne Whitneys, who is visiting her. Both these young girls made their debut last Winter, and there were a host of members of New York's most distinguished families on hand in honor of their presentations. I recall that several Bostonians went over to Gotham for Joan Whitney's debut, including among others, "Eleo" Sears, who, by the way, is back on her beloved North Shore again. Both Joan Whitney and her cousin are ardent devotees to all kinds of sports.

DIES WHEN AUTO PLUNGES INTO MAINE RIVER

North Anson, Me., July 26.—One woman was drowned near here today when an automobile plunged off a culvert into the Kennebec river. Mr. and Mrs. Almon Collins and three children of this town, the other occupants of the machine, struggled free of the wreckage and reached shore. The dead woman is Mrs. Sherman Collins of Augusta.

Mrs. Almon Collins extricated herself and one child from the water, which was from four to six feet deep, and then pushed another child safely upon the automobile top. The third youngster was pulled ashore a short distance down the river by the father.

MOONSHINE RAID IN JUNK YARD

Four men were taken in a moonshine raid in an East Cambridge junk yard today. Three 100-gallon stills were found in operation, police say, as well as 2,500 gallons of mash and 100 gallons of moonshine. The men were held for Federal officers. The raid was conducted by Captain Timothy Leahy and a squad of police from Station 3.

While the men were being questioned at police headquarters in regard to the raid, officers obtained warrants at the District Court.

The four were arraigned in court to answer charges of keeping and exposing. They gave their names as Meyer Wool, No. 142 Walnut street, Chelsea; Abraham Brostein, No. 42 Maverick street, Chelsea; Sam Fielding, No. 1536 Northshore road, Revere, and Morris Gross, No. 234 Chestnut street, Chelsea.

The cases were continued until August 2. Bail was set at $500.

In addition to the liquor, the police say they found 100 five-gallon cans, a gross of one-gallon cans and cartons such as might be used in shipping liquor away.

Field Director James P. Roberts personally inspected the "plant" and declared that it apparently did a flourishing usiness.

DR. VAN ALLEN HAS NO USE FOR "HIKE"

Rev. Dr. William H. van Allen, rector of the Church of the Advent, in this city, is out with a request to his congregation that they use no longer the word "hike" when they mean simply "march"; that they also give up using "win out" when the word "win" will serve the purpose, and "stand by" when "standing" will answer. Dr. van Allen believes that Christian people should be correct in speech as part of their morals.

OVERMAN HITS CLAIMS OF ECONOMY

By the Associated Press.

Washington, July 27.—Republican claims of economy in Federal appropriations and expenditures were denied by Senator Overman of North Carolina, ranking Democrat of the Senate appropriations committee, in a statement today in the Senate, comparing present and past appropriations.

"All the big headlines which have been appearing in the newspapers showing the great savings made by the budget system under the Harding administration were nothing but camouflage and pipe dreams," said Senator Overman, referring to recent statements by Chairmen Warren and Madden of the Senate and House appropriations committees, respectively.

Appropriations under the Republican administration for the present year were $563,000,000 more than those under the Wilson administration in 1918 for actual running expenses of the government, excluding war-time obligations, according to comparisons presented by Senator Overman.

"It is true, as stated by Senator Warren," said Senator Overman, "that the appropriations for the fiscal year of 1923 are $319,000,000 less than 1922, but by analyzing this statement it is found that a greater part of it was on account of a saving by Congress in decreasing the army and navy and by charging the good roads item to the postal appropriations—all of which are necessary reforms brought about by peace."

VARDAMAN FALSE, DECLARES WILSON

By Associated Press.

Jackson, Miss., July 26.—In answer to a request that he give his opinion of former Senator James K. Vardaman, who is a candidate for United States Senator, former President Woodrow Wilson asserted that he thought Mr. Vardaman "thoroughly false and untrustworthy."

Romance Wrecked

JUANITA MILLER.

Oakland, Cal., July 26.—All the color has gone out of the life of Juanita Miller, daughter of the late poet and naturalist, Joaquin Miller, and today she saw bleak divorce proceedings ahead. She has filed a divorce suit against Juan Miller, otherwise John Reeves, her "lily white" love, to whom she was married among the primitive surroundings of her home in the "Heights" in December, 1920.

ARMY STEAMERS AT BARGAIN PRICES

Seven army steamers at the South Boston base are going begging for customers. The city of Boston has offered $7,000 for a ship that cost $256,000. This is wanted for the Deer Island route. The War Department hesitates.

GIRL'S ROMANCE WITH COP IS ALL OVER

The romance of Ethel Croyle, twenty-five-year-old school teacher, and her erstwhile sweetheart, Patrolman Angelo De Gregorio of Station 12, is over.

The comely young woman who, with the police officer's picture in her grasp, attempted to commit suicide by jumping into Muddy River, declared to a police board trying De Gregorio for "conduct unbecoming an officer" that she never wants to see the policeman again.

Miss Croyle told a pitiful story to the three captains who comprised the judicial board. "I was a pure and innocent girl," she sobbed, "until I met him."

"I believed him when he told me that he loved me and would marry me. I trusted him. Now, I hate him. If I was cast on a desert island and he was the only living being there I would spurn him. I have been a fool, a mad little fool. I loved too well. Now, I hate."

The trial board which heard charges against the patrolman-lover today announced that the case had been taken under advisement.

De Gregorio, described as an Adonis and by the girl who sought death because he spurned her as a "cave wooer," was appointed to the new police force in 1919. He served in France during the war, being conspicuous in gallantry.

Miss Croyle today planned to return to her home in Pennsylvania and visit her mother. It was her express wish at the hospital, where she was taken from the waters of Muddy River and in danger of dying, that her mother not be notified.

DARK DAY BRIGHT FOR AMERICAN'S NANTASKET GUESTS

3,300 SAIL FOR DAY'S OUTING

Throngs Fill Steamers as Fast as Gates Are Let Down

When the good ship Nantasket started out "full speed ahead" from Rowe's Wharf this morning, it carried a capacity passenger list of mothers and kiddies bound for Nantasket, guests of the Boston American.

Over 3,300 sailed down the harbor today, the third day of the outings. Even when the Old Colony and Nantasket left, the throng still kept coming.

"Oh, we've lost the boat and can't go" was the tragic complaint of one mother with three youngsters trailing behind her. She was looking at the Nantasket, backing out.

Her disappointment was short-lived. In a trice a Nantasket Beach Steamship official stepped up and told the mother to "take it easy, you can go down on the regular boat in a few minutes."

SKIES NO TERROR.

Apparently the threatening skies were unseen by the thousands who took the trip. Ordinarily a dark day keeps folks at home, but not so those who planned to seek the cooling seashore "on" the American.

"Did I have a good time? Say, boy, I'm going to start saving my coupons all over again and bring the kids down on Friday."

This is what Mrs. John J. O'Hara of Pleasant street has to say in regard to the second day's outing at Nantasket, under the auspices of the Boston American.

Tuesday brought no less than 8,000 mothers and kiddies to the beach. Three thousand happy souls, glad to get away from the hot, dusty city for a few hours.

GLOOM SHOOED AWAY.

If one set out to tell about all the good things he saw at Nantasket, he would have to write all night. The original Gloom Chasers, that occupied the cars' sheets, would have found little to do at Nantasket. The gloom had been shooed away before the bellow of the horn at Rowe's Wharf announced the departure of the first boat in the morning.

Aside from the attractions at the beach, the hour's ride down the harbor and up again is worth the price of admission. Just now there are several fishing boats in the harbor, as well as lumber schooners and colliers. It would take a real navigator to answer the questions of the kiddies.

BATHING SUITS READY

Forewarned is forearmed.

That accounts for the wholesome presence of bathing suits. Previously some mothers came unprepared to furnish suits for themselves and the kiddies, but not so yesterday. Some of the more eager matrons had their youngsters in sea-nymph regalia before the boats docked.

As on Monday the rollers were high. The weather was much warmer, however, and before long the entire beach was dotted with bathers.

The Ragamore Baths worked at top speed handling the influx of Sam Richards and Rose Pitinoffs.

LOTS OF BABY VAMPS.

Talk about your baby-vamps. They came in yellow and purple and green and orange and in about every other color in the rainbow. Some babies, too. Some one suggested that a Baby Show would not be amiss. Righto. Juvenile flappers by the peck.

Mrs. Catherine Cuthert of Somerville was the "mother" of the whole party. In her eighty-first year she sat quietly on the boat watching with twinkling eyes while mothers and kiddies frollicked. On the beach she found most comfort in sitting on the promenade enjoying the scene before her eyes.

"These trips are great things. They didn't have them when I was a girl," was her comment.

Again today, and on Thursday and on Friday, these trips will be continued. The Boston American offers a very simple method of obtaining one of these trips. Read the advertisement on another page.

Clip the coupons, as directed, and come along with us.

The more the merrier.

Plays Nursemaid to Kittens; Now He's Yowling for Pay

Northboro, July 26.—Life for Charley Taylor is the cat's me-ow.

Everybody knows Charley. Not long ago Charley's wife put him out, whereupon Charley moved into the henhouse. He hoped Friend Wife would relent, but instead she divorced him.

Today Charley went to court. There it developed he has been recently "cat nursing." Seems Margaret Morrill, housekeeper for William D. Theall, went to Cuba and left Charley with two cats to mind.

"Take good care of 'em," she ordered.

Charley says he did. Fed 'em on the fat of the land. But when Miss Morrill came back he says she wouldn't pay him. Now he wants a settlement.

WEST END GIRL ASKS $10,000 HEART BALM

Scores of fervent letters, professing undying love and affection, written by Harry Levin, wealthy Providence and New York furrier, before he married a New York musical comedy actress, will figure in the $10,000 breach of promise suit brought against Levin by Sarah Goldman, West End candy factory worker.

The breach of promise suit, filed in Providence, is only one of the Goldman family's troubles. Out in St. Paul, Minn., Sarah's nineteen-year-old sister, Kate, is stranded. The $70 that Abraham Goldman had drawn from the bank to send his young daughter for her railroad fare home, was stolen from his pocket while on the platform of the North Station Elevated station.

For more than a year, it is claimed, Levin spent the week ends at the Goldman home at No. 137 Brighton street, West End, and Miss Goldman spent considerable time with his parents at their home, No. 28 Ocean street, Providence.

The engagement of the couple was announced on Christmas Day, 1919, and the wedding date set for February 12, 1920. As the day drew near Levin's letters to his bride-to-be became even more tender and endearing.

"My dearest Sarah," he wrote, "the time is only a few weeks away for our wedding and it seems that I cannot wait until that time. We will be happy together and I know that I will appreciate you."

On another occasion he wrote: "Sarah, sweetheart, I love you and I know that you love me. I enjoyed my visit during the week-end and I am looking forward to seeing you again. I think you are a wonderful girl and I am fortunate in having you for my sweetheart."

In another letter he said that being a married man would make him the happiest man in the world.

The bride-to-be prepared her trousseau and plans for the wedding were progressing satisfactorily when Levin met Miss Feldman, an actress, while on a business trip to New York.

The wedding was postponed. Levin gave no reason, in fact when Miss Goldman visited Providence, she says she was unable to find him. Then Easter came cards announcing the furrier's marriage to Miss Feldman.

One of these cards was sent to Hyman Goldman, Sarah's brother, at his home in Malden. Shortly before Levin had telephoned his former sweetheart saying he might visit her. She awaited his visit in vain.

Now Miss Goldman is determined to make Levin pay for her broken heart and to compensate her for the two years of waiting.

"I was faithful to him" she declared. "There was never another man in my life. I love him still."

FIVE CAUGHT IN N. H. LIQUOR CHASE

Manchester, N. H., July 26.—Four men and a woman were arrested and one hundred gallons of alcohol were confiscated following a fifteen-mile chase of alleged automobile liquor runners in which Sheriff John T. O'Dowd of Hillsborough County figured. Deputies are searching for a dozen other men who, they claim, were implicated in the attempted alcohol transaction and who escaped.

According to the story of a man who gave the name of Marshall, a Manchester man asked him to secure the liquor for a woman. Marshall said that he offered to "work the wires," but would have nothing else to do with it. Later he said he notified the woman that the liquor would be delivered from Boston in two cars.

Arrangements for the transfer were made and the cars arrived. At a lonely location in Bedford, the liquor, Marshall said, was deposited, and while the two drivers were in a nearby house a group of some fifteen men started loading the alcohol into several automobiles nearby. Marshall thereupon notified the sheriff. When officers arrived the cars with the liquor were fleeing and a chase followed.

MRS. BURDEN GAVE SHOCK TO NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., July 26. — This fashionable society resort was astonished when it awoke to find everything in preparation for the marriage of Guy Fairfax of New York to Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden. Even the most intimate friends of the couple did not know of the preparations.

SHOT IN NECK, BUT KILLS BANDIT

Akron, O., July 26. — Deputy Sheriff Frank Parri was shot through the neck and seriously wounded and a bandit was shot and killed in a pitched battle near Geauga Lake this morning. Three men in an automobile attempted to hold up Parri. He opened fire and the bandits ran back to their car. They then opened fire on Parri, one of the bullets penetrating his neck. While lying on the ground, Parri continued to fire, one of his shots striking the unidentified bandit in the back, killing him instantly.

SAILORS FIGHT DETECTIVES TO SAVE GIRLS

New York, July 26.—Dorothy Ready, twenty-six years old, and Esther Thorpe, twenty-three, who the police claim ran away from their homes in Brockton, Mass., were arrested here after a spectacular battle in which thirty navy men and many police reserves took part.

The girls are being held for arraignment in the women's court. Four of the sailors arrested during the battle were released after Mercy Smith told the court that he and the Ready girl were to be married. But the wedding which was planned for today will have to wait for the arraignment of the girls, who are charged with being runaways.

The two girls were arrested in an apartment at No. 124 West 34th street. In the apartment at the time were Smith and Kenney, sailors. When the detectives arrested the girls the two sailors hired a taxi and hurried for reinforcements. From the St. Nicholas police hall they recruited twenty-eight cops. The gang was waiting for the detectives at the 6th street elevated station when the detectives arrived with the girls.

OLYMPIC DAMAGED, SAILING CANCELLED

London, July 26.—The sailing of the White Star liner Olympic for New York, August 2, has been cancelled in consequence of the discovery, after the vessel was drydocked at Southampton, that her stern post was cracked. Those who had booked passage on the Olympia will be transferred to the Homeric.

The Daily Mail quotes a White Star line official as saying that the injury to the Olympic must have been of long standing.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Can the soundness, the solidity, the genuineness of the business recovery and the depth of the prevailing faith in the outlook be doubted in view of recent developments in the teeth of the now embarrassing and handicapping coal and railway strikes?

Had there been anything artificial or superficial in the revival the gravity of the strikes would have brought demoralization and collapse.

Instead, what do we find?

Stock quotations have reached a new high average for the year, the advances embracing many varieties of issues, from second-rate industrials to Pennsylvania Railway shares.

Bond prices are also at the highest point of the year, with half-a-dozen Liberty issues reaching the best figures ever quoted.

Absorption of new security offerings continues remarkably keen, with the choicest issues oversubscribed several times, and in one instance ten times over.

Particularly significant and encouraging is the number of cheering dividend announcements coming almost daily from boards of directors. Utility companies, industrial companies, mining companies, and even the railroads have figured in this connection. Moreover, it is known that the automobile industry will shortly add a similar item, and that the current half-year will bring many more dividend resumptions and increases as a consequence of the better profits now being garnered by numerous concerns.

In important circles preparations are actively under way for the launching of various new enterprises and for the expansion of existing concerns. This spirit of enterprise has been stimulated by the increasing availability of money at reasonable rates and by the growing certainty that better times lie ahead.

• • •

Employment returns continue to reveal less and less unemployment, apart, of course, from the effects of Superabundance of labor promises to be followed before long by scarcity of labor. Already a few modest wage advances have been made.

• • •

The almost general conviction in high financial and business circles is that settlement of the strikes will be the signal for a forward movement by industry and business.

New York Market Generally Weak but With Some Strong Spots; Money at 3%

U. S. STEEL HAS ANOTHER DIP BELOW PAR

In late trading the New York market was generally weak, but with some strong spots. U. S. Steel took another dip under par to 99¾. Call money renewed at 4 per cent., then dropped to 3, lowest for several days.

National Lead surged 3 at 96. Central Leather was off 2¼ at 37. Atlantic Gulf receded 6 at 30. Stromberg yielded 2¾ at 41.

Corn Products, up 2 at 108¾, set a record for all time. Industrial Alcohol, up 2½ at 65½, set a 1922 high.

Mexican Pete went to 168, up 4, then dropped to 162¾.

Recessions in oils at their lowest were: Pacific, 3 at 65¾; Mexican Seaboard, 6½ at 23¾; Mex Seaboard certificates, 4½ at 21½; Phillips Petroleum, 1¾ at 31¾; Royal Dutch, 1¾ at 83¾; Hannadal B, 2¼ at 24.

Sugars were firm on further boosts in the price of refinery products, but weakened late in the day. Punta Alegre advanced 3 at 61½.

Crucible added 1½ at 85¾, but receded to 83.

Studebaker lifted 1½ to 135¾, and then was off 2¾. Sears Roebuck went forward a point at 89½ on further business improvement reports.

Curb Attempts to Set Stutz Market

Feature trading on New York Curb was initial action in recreating a market for Stutz Motor stock. Tuesday one firm bid 10 for 100 shares of this stock and this bid was advanced to 11. Before midday the bid was increased to 15, without transactions being effected.

DEMAND STERLING IS SLIGHTLY OFF

Demand sterling was off 13-16 at $4.52 3-16. Cable, $4.52 3-16. Other demands were: France, .0629¼; lire, .0468; Belgian francs, .0738; marks, .0001¾. Argentine, .2913; Swiss francs, .1896; guilders, .3859; pesetas, .1554½; Sweden kronen, .2598; Norway kronen, .1685.

Boston Notes

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—"Nothing to do but continue to follow in the market and hold stocks for substantially higher prices which we are confident they will make this summer."

FURTHER RESUMPTION of dividends by Boston coppers is to be expected. On the issues which have resumed paying, the "comeback" on stock prices should become more pronounced.

NATIONAL LEAD employes who bought the stock by subscription, first at $60, then at $75, are now in a position to benefit prestily by their investment.

PRESIDENT SWOPE, new General Electric head, is a Tech graduate. He can find his name on the concern's payrolls of 1892 with this inscription: "G. Swope, helper, per day, $1.00."

KENNECOTT is persistently talked of as slated for a good-sized move ahead on the strength of its general improvement and low-cost production.

EXPRESS COMPANIES will benefit by the rates agreement with the railroads in that they will be assured of steady earnings at a figure deemed equitable.

TIRE MARKET is said to have been greatly disturbed by price cuts, with dealers and public holding off buying until stability is in sight.

OIL CONSUMPTION at present would insure most good companies of considerable profits, and there is no reason, aside from professional juggling, for such stocks to go lower.

BEET SUGAR crop is expected to be lower for United States this year, latest estimates showing 536,617 long tons against 906,000 tons last year.

EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS issues continue to show sterling strength as public appreciation grows of how finances of this concern have been stabilized and improved.

ATCHISON'S new high was not unexpected by many Boston investors. The Atchison loadings for last week were 33,444 cars, against 31,916 in previous week and 28,817 a year ago.

CENTRAL LEATHER'S deficit figures in themselves contained little cheer, but there is ground for investors' optimism in rising leather quotations.

INFANT'S SKELETON FOUND IN TRUNK

North Attleboro, July 26.—Louis Morse, a wrecker, employed in tearing down an apartment house at the corner of Mason avenue and Washington street found the skeleton of an infant in a trunk. The trunk was hidden beneath a pile of women's clothing in a closet that had been nailed up. A corset string was drawn tightly around the infant's neck. Medical Examiner Charles E. Holden said that the body had been in the trunk about five years. State Policeman Thomas Clemmy is making an investigation.

STRIKE PARLEY FAILURE AT NEWMARKET

By CHARLES D. POWER.

Manchester, N. H., July 26.—Be it ever so humble or be it ever so important there seems to be no mill in this State free and independent.

Although there was a conference between officials of the Newmarket Manufacturing Company and a committee representing the 1,600 striking employes Tuesday afternoon, no agreement was reached on terms of settlement.

Charles Walcott, treasurer of the company, came up from Boston and dominated the meeting. Figuratively speaking, he took Agent W. B. Gallant of the mills across his knees and treated him in the well-known manner in which naughty boys are treated.

The conference was the outcome of the activities of Agent Gallant. It was he who invited the strikers to appoint a committee to attend. He cautioned them that the committee must have full authority to act on any terms of settlement that might be proposed.

It was Agent Gallant who represented that the Newmarket Company had good business prospects which they wanted to make the most of, and for that reason, desired a resumption of operations in the mills without unnecessary delay.

But he faded out of the prominent place in the picture after Treasurer Walcott arrived on the scene. The official from Boston was in the foreground all through the conference and assumed the principal speaking part for the company.

At the conclusion of the conference the strikers' committee issued the following statement:

"The conference held today between the officials of the Newmarket Manufacturing Company and former employes resulted in no settlement of the strike, due to the fact that Mr. Walcott, treasurer of the company, had no proposition to offer to the committee representing the textile union who were prepared and had power from the rank and file of the strikers to settle the situation providing a proposition worthy of consideration had been offered.

"The spirit of the Newmarket strikers is unchanged by the result of the conference. We are still determined to fight this industrial battle until victory is ours."

Strike leaders in Manchester say the fiasco in Newmarket is nothing more than they expected.

BROCKTON VETERAN SEEKING A DIVORCE

Brockton, July 26.—Divorce suit was filed today in Norfolk Superior Court by Ralph M. Coulter of Avon against Lillian M. Coulter, now an inmate at the State Hospital at Wrentham. Coulter charges desertion.

The couple caused a flutter by their marriage in 1919. Before the war Coulter filed marriage intentions, but no license was issued. After the war he filed new intentions, but in the meantime the Boston Society for the Care of Girls brought charges against the couple. While waiting trial the couple slipped away and got married. Their case was filed.

DELAY IN BRITISH DEBT NEGOTIATIONS

Washington, July 26.—Negotiations with financial representatives of Great Britain for the funding of that country's $5,000,000,000 war debt to this country, scheduled to begin early in September, may be deferred until the latter part of that month, it was indicated today at the treasury.

Three members of the allied debt funding commission will be away from Washington during the first part of September, it was explained, and officials expressed the belief that the British mission would not come to this country until the American body would have a majority available for handling the negotiations.

RUNAWAY WIFE BACK HOME, FORGIVEN

Mrs. Mary Louise Brunelle of Wilton, N. H., picked up a copy of the Boston American. Turning the pages she was startled to see her picture.

With it was a story telling how she, mother of five children, had left her home nearly a month ago, lured by the talk of the big city, fashionable clothes and parties of Revere Beach. Her sister, Miss Bertha Dunn, had written her to come to Boston and "have a good time."

In the story of her disappearance was this paragraph:

"Brunelle is ready to forgive his wife. He wants her back for the sake of the children. If she won't come back for him, he says, perhaps she will come back for Leah, Ella, Perry, Viola and Arthur, the children."

Viola, particularly, the article quoted Brunelle as saying, needed her mother. She was the baby, only seventeen months old.

When Mrs. Brunelle saw the picture and read the story, she went to the home of her father in Manchester, N. H., and from there she called her husband up.

"Did you mean what you said about forgiving me?" she asked.

"Come back to me and the kids," was his reply. "I've forgiven you already."

Mrs. Brunelle is back now.

HOSPITAL WAR DECLARED IN QUINCY

War has been declared in Quincy.

On one side is the Board of Managers of the Quincy City Hospital. On the other side a few score of residents whose homes adjoin the hospital.

The question at stake is the location of a proposed service building which will house the power plant and laundry of the hospital.

Recently the city authorized the sum of $100,000 for the erection of the service building, the money to be raised by a bond issue.

When the board of managers of the hospital announced that the building would be built on the Whitewell street side, there was a roar of protest.

Whitewell street is one of the chief residential thoroughfares in the city and its residents feel that the construction of the proposed building will decrease the value of their property.

Efforts to convert the board to their way of thinking having failed, outcry are now going to adopt a new tack. Henceforth, a delegation will pay daily visits to Mayor William A. Bradford, in an attempt to dissuade him from signing the proposed bond issue. This is the last resort.

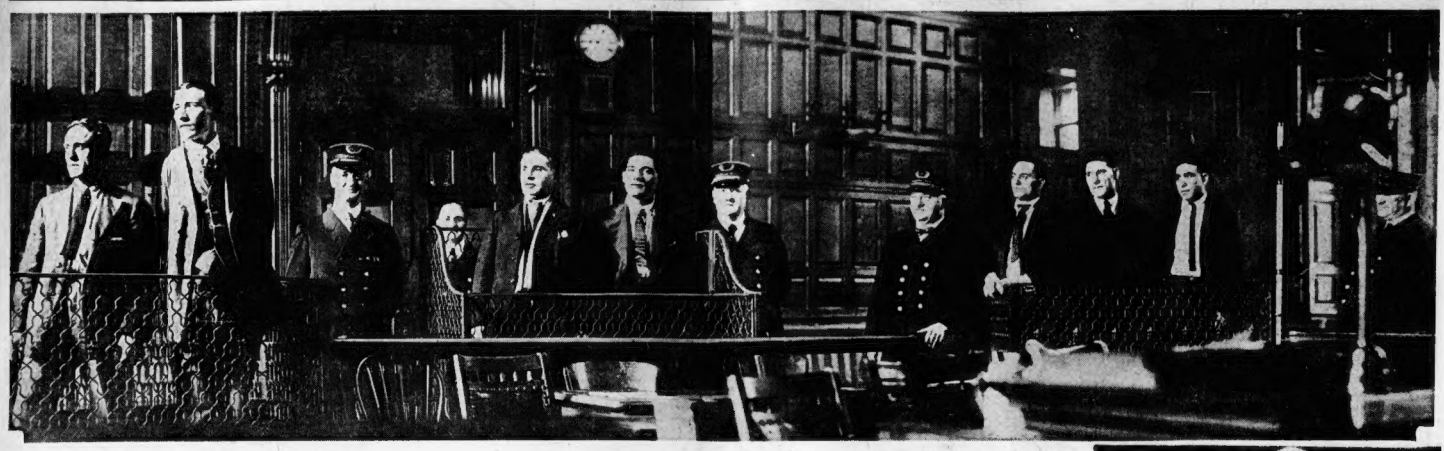
SEVENMEN FACE TRIAL FOR LIFE IN NORTH END MURDER CASE



COURTROOM SCENE AS SEVEN ALLEGED slayers battle to escape death chair. This is first time in years such a number of persons have simultaneously faced trial for murder in this State. They are charged with killing Michael Carbone in an alleged Black Hand plot. In the first cage are defendants Mascotti and Bontorno; in second, Tronanmei and Toscano; and in the third Di Padova, Simboli, and Anzardo. The court officers standing behind the prisoners are, left to right, Fitzgerald, Pierce, McCarthy, Donovan and McMann. (Photo taken by Gus Williams).

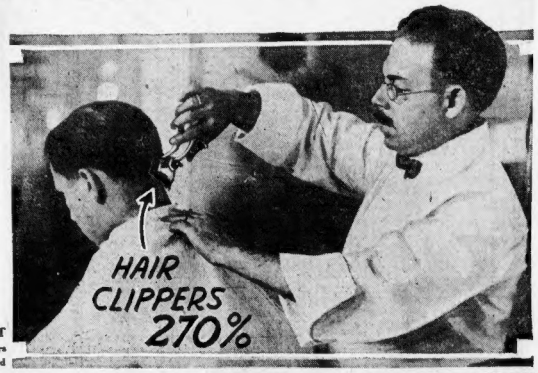
CHILD DYING FROM Thirty-Foot Plunge! Little Pasquale Vergie is dying, a victim to that great Coloseus, the city. He didn't have green plots to play in. The squalid tenement district was his haven. Thus, seeking a breath of fresh air, he ambled out onto the fire escape of his home, No. 146 Salem street, and tumbled thirty feet into an open bulkhead below. At the Relief Hospital he is expected to die.

"IT'S A DOG-GONE Shame the Way They Make Us Dog's Lead a Dog's Life"! Rover, Bruno, Teddy, Fido and Fifi, get your muzzle outa moth balls 'cause the health department says you gotta wear a wire nose piece for 90 days. Dogs not muzzled or on short leash are subject to extermination, according to the edict.

HERE'S A BOSTON AMERICAN OUTING BABY! Does she look happy and joyful and everything? We'll say she does! They all get that way on these delightful harbor trips. She's little Mary Green—and guess how old?

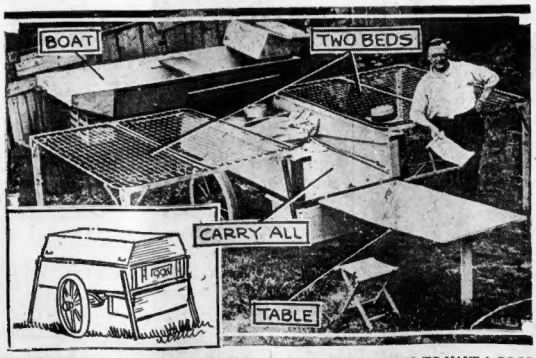
COVERS A Multitude of Shins! Get set, Nantasket, for the "togatowel," a brightly colored garment that takes the place of a bathrobe when you wander through the streets on your way to the sea. After the plunge you just put it on and let it dry you. (International News Reel).

FOLKS USED TO GO DOWN TO SEE THE SEA, BUT Now They Go to See the American's Sea Beauties! Today's winners are Miss Mary M. Kuhl of No. 14 L street, Brockton (at top), and Miss Susan Haun of No. 2 Hingham street, Boston. You can win, too. Send your entry to Sea Beauty Editor, Boston American.

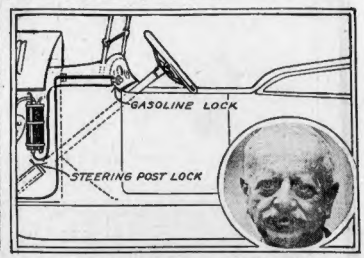


THE UNITED STATES IS THE CREDITOR NATION Of the World and Need Not Fear Imports—Yet the Republican Senators Have Framed a Tariff Bill That Will Spread Discontent and Maintain the High Living Cost if Enacted! The bill and its evils are inextricably bound up in the life of the average man. The humble barber shop is one of the victims. If barbers are forced to pay 270 p. c. more duty on hair clippers, it is obvious that the patrons must pay more for his hair cut.

SCHAEFFER SYSTEM IDEAL METHOD OF RESUSCITATING DROWNING Persons! The American today offers the second step in reviving victims of water accidents. Save the entire series of four, it may enable you to save a life. After carrying in the drowning person from the water lay her (or him) face downward and firmly press the ribs to force the water from the lungs. This is better than rolling the victim on a barrel. It is less violent and prevents choking. Tomorrow we'll show you how to start respiration. Pictures posed by George C. Clarke, Nantasket life guard, and Miss Anna Breen of Charlestown.



IF YOU HIT THE TRAIL WITH THIS TRAILER YOU'RE BOUND TO HAVE A GOOD Vacation! Just hitch it on behind your flivver and make for the woods, or Oshkosh, or some other interesting place. It was devised by Dr. Carroll Behymer and combines all the comforts of home. The little sketch shows how compact the trailer is when on the road. Aside from the two beds, the carryall and the table, it boasts a regular "he" sized boat, which forms the top of the trailer when folded.



A LESSON IN OPTIMISM! TWENTY YEARS AGO Daniel C. Fisher of Boston became blind. It failed to break his spirit. He set out to become an inventor—and he has. Among his recent creations are the gasoline and steering post locks for automobiles. They are thief proof. Yet he never rode in an auto but once in his life. Was a mechanic before he lost his sight.

"AFRAID TO FIGHT," the Universal production at Loew's Orpheum this week, could scarcely be more conventional in plot. The audience is about one reel ahead of the picture all the way, but the fact that Frank Mayo is the hero of the occasion makes it bearable. He has much to battle against, with the author, scenarist and villain all against him, but he manages to come through the action adequately.

The story need not be told here because it is too well known and obvious even in unfolding on the screen. Mr. Sarver, who courageously takes the blame for the sub-titles, has done something very strange and remarkable with them. He was determined to be funny at any cost, even the cost of humor. They are quite pitiful.

The attraction at the Orpheum Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be Shirley Mason in the Fox picture, "Lights of the Desert."

MEIGHAN'S NEXT

THOMAS MEIGHAN and Al Green, his director, have done so well together so far that they are teaming up for still another success, this time "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," which they are filming at Catalina Island, thereby combining business with pleasure.

HAYS IN HOLLYWOOD

WILL H. HAYS is in Los Angeles for a "close-up" of Hollywood and its manners. He is visiting each studio in a sort of triumphal march, for all work is suspended while the forces greet their chief. He refused to make any statement regarding the Arbuckle case, though he has been stormed with questions on the subject since his arrival.

Making a speech at a meeting of business men on Monday, he declared that "the principle of freedom upon which this nation is founded makes public censorship of press, pulpit, film, or spoken word virtually an impossibility.

"Censorship," he went on, "hasn't been done successfully and never will be. Too many people who know nothing about the business are named on censorship boards. We are going to obviate the necessity of censorship."

LOUISE FAZENDA JOINS

NONE other than Louise Fazenda has signed up for a comedy role in the Metro special, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." She will be seen at Manly Skinner. Though she has just signed a contract to be a principal light of the Mack Sennett forces, yet she finds enough spare time on her hands to work outside, too. Her last screen appearance was in the Cosmopolitan Production "The Beauty Shop."

Louise Fazenda

Others who will be seen in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" are Blanche Sweet, John Bowers, Lon Chaney and Barbara LaMarr. The filming of this story started on Monday.

SPEAKING OF BLANCHE SWEET

MISS SWEET, now Mrs. Marshall Neilan, has just bobbed her hair after resisting the temptation to become a flapper for some months. Hollywood is unanimous in declaring that it is becoming to her.

HELEN HOLMES AGAIN

HELEN HOLMES, the famous railroad "stunt" queen, is coming back to the screen after some years of rest. She will support "Hoot" Gibson in his next film, "The Lone Hand," in which Marjorie Daw will be the "sweet, young thing." This would indicate that Miss Holmes will be the heavy.

"THE FLIRT" FINISHED

HOBART HENLEY, who seems to feel still that back of the camera is better than the front and who refuses to stop directing and become an actor again, has finished work on the filming of the Booth Tarkington story, "The Flirt," in which Helen Jerome Eddy and Eileen Percy are featured.

IMPOSSIBLE SIR—I TOOK 'EM ALL OUT BEFORE I BROUGHT IT TO YOU

TENDLER DECLARES HE WILL KNOCK OUT THE CHAMPION

SAYS LEONARD WILL NOT LAST FIVE

By JACK CONWAY

Delanco, N. J., July 2—Lefty Lew Tendler says he will knock Benny Leonard out inside of five rounds when they battle at Boyle's Thirty Acres tomorrow night. There isn't anything of the bravado in Lew's statement. He's merely one of those confident, carefree youths who has explicit faith in his own ability to smash through his rival's defence and count with the big punch.

"A bout with Leonard has been my one big ambition," said Tendler as he loafed around his training quarters. "I have met about every lightweight of prominence with the exception of Leonard. My ability to score with heavy left-hand punches to the body have enabled me to crash the [illegible] champion on a foul.

Lew Will Set a Terrific Pace From the Very Start

"I shall set a terrific pace from the start. In this way I shall tire Leonard and also compel him to open up. And once we get down to swapping punches, I think the advantage will all be on my side.

Naturally I am not pleased as a result of some of the unkind remarks Leonard has made about me. He referred to me as a very ordinary fighter. He has charged that most of my victims have been set up. Then he claims he has each time ways to beat me.

Will Wallop Hard to Take Some Conceit Out of Leonard

Aggressiveness and punching power, however, are two very valuable assets for any contender for a championship. I have both and feel sure that I will give the lightweight champion a hard battle.

I have always put all of my power into my punches. But I'll wallop away just a little harder at Boyle's Thirty Acres tomorrow night. Knock off Leonard's conceit, that's what I have always desired to do. I'll take some of the conceit out of his system.

[illegible] Tendler was asked to tell how he will fight the lightweight champion. He gave [illegible] such many hard high on the jaw and a knockout and that the [illegible]

Has Won Most of His Fights By Punches to Body

"I have won most of my battles by body punching. It has been a case of forcing the issue until I was able to get to close quarters. Then the heavy left hand [illegible] and [illegible] jabbing into the mid-section.

"Leonard has proved [illegible] to me that he can't stand up against my style of fighting. Rocky Kansas almost [illegible] his feat. So did Freddie Welsh. In both [illegible] show to the jaw accomplished the [illegible]. Benny's cleverness enabled him to keep a second punch, which might have been a knockout, from going over.

"If I drop Leonard with a body punch he will be weak when he regains his feet. I'll be in a position then to end things with another well-directed left hand smash to the jaw.

"I realize that my only chance of winning the lightweight title is by scoring with a knockout. Of course I would grab the title if Benny were to land a low blow, but I don't figure on any such thing happening. Furthermore I wouldn't care to win the championship on a foul.

[illegible] many go over in three or four rounds.

The days of heavy training at the Tendler [illegible] are over. I no longer is in the best physical condition, [illegible] and planned to take things easy today.

Eddie Fitzsimmons tipped Tendler [illegible] for the Philadelphian assures [illegible] fought back like a couple of regular mems of wild cats.

There is no getting away from the fact that Tendler is a hard hitting boy. He has youth, experience, and a fine record.

Leonard, on the other hand, is a real high class fighter but there is no getting away from the fact that a flock of his opponents have been in the form of [illegible]

Tendler's supporters very properly point to the fact that Benny has taken on men like Dundee and Kansas time and time again, while he has avoided meeting Tendler. They claim that his refusal to enter a ring with slugging Lew is because he has not got any too much confidence in his ability to dispose of the hard hitting southpaw from Philadelphia.

Leonard has about punched himself out of opponents and it might help Benny on his way to his second million if he could quarrel with Tendler a couple of times other than this little affair over in Jersey tomorrow night.

Benny, on the other hand, will suffer a loss of prestige if it appears he is not going to count with a kayo tomorrow night. There are still people who claim that the recent Leonard-Britton bout was no all that it should have been. Therefore, if Leonard does not do his darndest to wallop Lefty Lew out of the picture tomorrow night, there will be a frightful squawk from the boys who pay the freight.

[illegible] Lew [illegible] and the [illegible] are his buddies

TENDLER DOING HIS STUFF

Jack Conway Picks the Fight Winner Tomorrow

Jack Conway, boxing expert of the Boston American, has visited Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler at their training camps in New Jersey. He has got the real dope on the rival fighters. He has also got the "inside" facts on the big lightweight title battle as whispered among the boys IN THE KNOW.

Jack will reveal his findings in tomorrow's Boston American. He will pick the winner of the lightweight battle of the century. And he will tell why Benny or Lew will grab the honors, as the case may be.

SHADE FINISHES TRAINING FOR BOGASH

George Shade, the K. O. king of the Pacific Coast, who clashes with Louis Bogash of Bridgeport in the feature bout at the Revere Cycle Track Friday night arrived in Boston today to finish his training for the bout.

Shade is nursing a secret ambition to send Bogash to the mat before the end of the tenth round. Bogash, however, has never been sent to the mat in any of his local bouts.

Hambone Kelly of South Boston will clash with Jim Montgomery, middleweight champion of Ireland. Montgomery has met Dave Rosenberg, Augie Ratner, Jeff Smith and Jack Delaney and none has been able to send him down for [illegible].

Willie Corbett, of Somerville, will take on a newcomer in Billy [illegible] of Holyoke who has won his last sixteen starts by knockouts. [illegible] Sheppard, of Woburn, meets Dennis O'Neil, of Nashua, N. H., and Joe Reardon of Lynn, clashes with Young Barrett, of Lynn.

Reservations can be secured at Room 8, 23 School street, Revere Cycle track and 86 Shirley avenue, Revere.

TAD PICKS LEONARD TO WIN EARLY BY K.O.

By TAD

[illegible] row night Mr. Bennah Leonard meets the toughest contender in the lightweight division.

If the battle is on the square it should be a corker and the winner will have earned his pittance.

Leonard has had it soft as lightweight champion until now.

He has outpointed and bowled over the greatest aggregation of second-class lightweights the boxing world ever saw. There was never a time when a contender was considered an even-money chance against him.

Tendler fight now is quoted on the short end at 2 and 3 to 1, but strange to say, there is very little betting.

It may be that the betting boys are wise to themselves.

Leonard has put up some [illegible] queer battle during his reign and those on the outside have been frightened more than ever.

As we said at the start, if Leonard and Tendler are ready on the square about this thing and fight on their merits, a man on the long end of a bet would have no squawk.

True, there is no decision to be rendered, but then one or the other should have such a big lead that a decision will be unnecessary.

Leonard is a pretty good hitter. He packs a dangerous punch, and, according, to his own dope, will stop Tendler in four rounds. He states further that Tendler is the biggest [illegible] he's met so far.

Tendler is nobody's fool in the [illegible] game. He has been tried and [illegible]

[illegible] and [illegible] by [illegible] Leonard, since the [illegible] to be fussed a bit. On the other hand Tendler is used to facing the man with his left extended [illegible] would be awkward for him to box a man who poses as he does himself. It would seem queer and unusual.

[illegible] pose and body punches [illegible] Champion Art Wolgast worried to death when they met.

Brown's pose and body punches almost stopped Wolgast in their [illegible] bout at Philly. Wolgast squawked foul (and most of them do when those southpaws [illegible] [illegible] but [illegible] and [illegible] to continue. Mr. [illegible] never went through such a [illegible] six rounds.

Later on the pair met [illegible] ten-round bout [illegible] and [illegible] more than stopped Wolgast [illegible] and [illegible] a stalemate.

Tendler, essentially a [illegible] is liable to [illegible] [illegible] and has [illegible] [illegible] tested at the present [illegible] His opponent [illegible]

All suckers do that. Their [illegible] are always up in the air. [illegible] two or three in, and then [illegible] has choice of the chin or body.

[illegible] has been down, but HE [illegible]

[illegible] has been down, and [illegible]

That's one of the quitter in the makeup of either, but much of the business [illegible]

[illegible] had it all wrong when he said box fighting, that's no business, buttonhole maker—that's a [illegible]

Throw that out. It doesn't go any more.

They've made boxing a business. DON'T BET unless you are IN THE KNOW.

It might be one of these last tag [illegible]

ARENA SIGNS A HIGH CLASS PRELIM

Not satisfied with offering the fans of Boston and New England one of the best main bouts in the history of local boxing, the Arena [illegible] has signed an eight round preliminary which promises action and enthusiasm in abundance. Billy Shayne, of Quincy, and Freddie Warren, of South Boston will be the combatants in this number.

Half of Quincy will root for their favorite who bested Warren in a very tough bout at the Arena only a few weeks ago.

Jack Malone will arrive in Boston tomorrow and wants somebody to spar with him for one or two days at the Bowdoin square gym.

Mickey Walker sends word along that his condition is great and that he has paid particular attention to the boxing end of his game with the idea in view of beating Malone at his own specialty.

The club's downtown office, 39 Court street, is a busy spot these days with requests for reservations.

ST LOUIS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PROTESTS YANKEE DEAL

APPEALS TO LANDIS ON DUGAN TRADE

St. Louis, Mo., July 26—Letters of protest, terming as "unsportsmanlike" the New York-Boston deal, by which the Yankees acquired Third Baseman John Dugan and Outfielder Elmer Smith, were sent to former Judge K. M. Landis, national baseball commissioner, by the Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club of this city today. Copies of the letters also were sent to President Ban Johnson of the American League and President John Heydler of the National League.

"We believe the practice of allowing a stronger major league club to strengthen itself at the expense of its rivals by purchasing the 'stars' of a competing club in mid-season is indefensible," Herman Spoehrer, president of the Rotary Club, told the commissioner.

"We believe that a continuance of this practice will militate against the future of baseball and that it will ultimately defeat its own ends by sacrificing public confidence."

This letter continues.

Mr. Spoehrer asked the commissioner that rules be adopted "that will prevent forever the repetition of such an unsportsmanlike deal." Similar words of protest voiced the objections of the Chamber of Commerce to this deal.

Frazee Takes Look at His Wreck

Chicago, Ill. July 26—If Harold Frazee, the swapping demon, who engineered the baseball trade of the century, was due here today for a peek at the ruins of his diamond machine. He's coming to see what sort of game Chick Fewster, Elmer Miller and Johnny Mitchell are capable of playing after having served months of durance vile on the far end of the Yankee bench.

He may glimpse all three of the title strangers in Duffy's battle array. Then again he may see only Mitchell. Johnny was cavorting about when the Red Sox dropped their first engagement on the second tour of the cornbelt, 3 to 1, but Fewster and Miller were reported missing.

Larry Graver announced they had agreed in New York to adjust personal affairs and would positively appear for the second contest of the series. If they get here by 2 o'clock tiffy will shunt them into the picture.

Mitchell disported about the ozonward in able fashion yesterday. He appeared at the plate up ter occasions, plucked one of the ve single's allowed from young Ted enkenship's delivery, belted a apid liner to Strunk and on his at showing struck out. Detnatively the former Yank outfield on speared five chances without slip. John should be of considerable help to the Fenway Park folk.

WHALEN A FUTURE HANS WAGNER

The Emerald A. C. of Roxbury comes to hat stating they have in Johnny Whalen the greatest little short fielder of the 14-15-year old class around the Hub. Johnny covers considerable ground and at the bat he is in a class with Tillie Walker. Games are wanted with teams of this age. Write John T. Welby, No. 21 Clifton street, Roxbury.

JEFF TESREAU PICKS CORNETS

There is a possibility of seeing Jeff Tesreau, former big league idol, battling for honor in the Greater Boston Twilight League as he did in the majors some time ago.

Jeff Tesreau.

Jeff has been signed to play with the strong Cornet All Stars of Lynn. This club is booked to meet the North Cambridge Knights of Columbus at the Little River Grounds in the Shoe City tonight in one of the three Twilight attractions.

The other two baseball tussles will find the St. Andrew's A. A. battling with the South Boston All Stars at the C. J. Lee grounds, South Boston. The third game will bring together St. Joseph's Catholic Association and the Reading Town Team. It will be staged at Reading.

With this trio of games the Twilight League followers should be treated with good baseball as the teams couldn't be more evenly matched.

Reading, leading the league, is just plugging along with enough steadiness to keep right out front and, although they are meeting the tail-enders, the St. Joseph's may surprise a lot of persons.

ANOTHER "TITLE" TEAM IN FIELD

There's a fuss among the sand lot youngsters of South Boston. Every mother's son seems to have a ball team and they are all claiming titles.

The latest nine to appear is the South Boston A. C., who claim they have first hold on the 15-17 year-old title.

Matty Connelly and Manager Matty Connelly says he will meet any of the other nines.

Those who desire games with this youthful band write or call Matty Connelly, No. 58 Tudor street. Telephone South Boston 72150.

WINTHROP K. OF C. WANT GAMES

Winthrop Knights of Columbus without a doubt one of the strongest semi-pro baseball nines in Massachusetts, are desirous of meeting other strong nines for Sunday afternoon games away from home. Lawrence Town team St. Mary's of Woonsocket and a lot of other classy ball clubs in Providence preferred.

John Cummings

John Cummings the brilliant young shortstop of the "Casey" team, is going better than ever. One of the other stars on the club is "Jeff" Mellanson, former St. Anselm High School twirler, who is travelling at high speed. Winthrop, or telephone 10 that address.

BIKERS BATTLE IN BIG RACE AT REVERE

Second in importance to the paced race are the qualifying heats for the New England professional sprint championship. Six heats are scheduled and the winners will qualify for the final Saturday.

In addition to the stellar races two amateur and two professional sprint events have been arranged.

TITLE BATTLE AT ROSLINDALE

A treat is in store for the Roslindale Twilight fans this evening, when the Roslindale Baseball club faces the Mt. Hope Town team to decide the district title.

Interest is greater than it has been since the old "A. A." teams used to battle it out for supremacy. Roslindale will present its regular line-up with Jackie Lane, former all-scholastic star, covering the hot corner.

DORCHESTER FINDS MALDEN K. C. EASY

Malden Knights of Columbus were walloped by the Dorchester Baseball Club of the Twilight League, 11 to 4. Those Malden boys have a wonderful ball pasture in their home town, and when they hit the rotund and pelda Round Park they were set.

Big Jim Trayors opposed the visitors, and though the Kay Sox managed to hit him hard, lackluster support saved him. Ada Hart in the seventh frame drove a freak homer which skidded off a little stone in the infield and scored two runners ahead of him.

LEONARD SEES BIG GATE IN TENDLER BOOSTS

By SID MERCER.

New York, July 26—An axiom of boxing promoters is "Always Build Up the Contender."

That is what they are doing for Lew Tender. A month ago around New York, Leonard was considered a sure winner in next Thursday's fight, but the "build" reports coming from Tendler's training camp have raised a doubt. George B. Reed, the promoter, expects to cash in heavily on this doubt.

Leonard speaking more frankly to newspapermen than he ever did on the eve of an important championship battle makes light of Tendler's chances to go 12 rounds with him.

I hope you boys continue to boost Tendler's stock," he said at his Budd Lake camp, "for that will make the gate a big one. However, I want to say right here that I consider this one of the softest bouts I ever signed for.

"I can't see Tendler at all. He can't box with me and I can hit with him. Those stories about him developing a crushing left hand make me laugh. I've fought those hard suckers before.

"He could open up with Bobby Barrett, who is a ring novice and Johnny Dundee, who is a notoriously light hitter. Just let him come at me wide open and watch who flops.

Leonard is not given to idle boast ing, hence his remarks on Tendler must be taken as indication of perfect confidence in his own powers.

"The reason I am so sure Tendler will not stay the limit with me," says Benny, "is that I am signing him this fight in the best physical and mental condition I have enjoyed for three years.

"Tendler's crowd, I notice, are figuring on Lew to beat the Leonard who fought Jack Britton a few weeks ago. There is no comparison between my form then and now.

"Before I met Britton I hadn't had a fight in three months. I trained in a gymnasium and rain kept me off the road. I did everything badly when I got into the ring with Britton.

"That fight and the one with Kansas put me on edge."

Tendler's actions and words bespeak confidence expressed. Lefty Lew has not replied publicly to Leonard's scornful estimate of his prowess.

Privately, he has expressed bitter sentiment. Low is not much of a talker on any subject. He maintains, however, that the impending combat is not preying on his mind. "The best man will win," is what he tells the interviewers who are flocking to his camp at Delanco, N. J.

A majority of the Philadelphia boxing experts, who have been observing Tendler's work this last week, incline to the belief that the fight will go the limit or will end with a claim of foul by Leonard.

* * *

They base this belief on the probability of Tendler fighting carefully to avoid Leonard's right hand punches.

RUPERT HUGHES' GREATEST NOVEL

What Would YOU Do?

IF you were beautiful young Remember Steddon, a Massachusetts minister's daughter, whose sweetheart died before the wedding, would you try to bring up your baby among those who knew you in your own home town? Or would you run away for a fresh start with new surroundings? If you had your living to make, would you try to get into the movies? Dr. Bretherick, the family physician, advised Remember to go West. This she did, writing her parents a fictitious tale of having married and lost her "husband." She falls from a cliff and is told that the accident caused the death of her unborn child. Remember arrrives in Los Angeles and determines to "pay the price" for a chance in the movies. but is refused. She is coached by Director Claymore and nearly loses her life in a storm scene. Father Steddon writes a scathing letter. This struggle of a young girl to work out her own salvation is stirringly told in Rupert Hughes' greatest novel. Go on with the story.

"You lay off'n my star! I seen her first!" said Miss Driscoll

TOM HOLBY came up and commanded her to dance. When she begged off he lifted her from her chair and eloped with her like Jupiter carrying off Europa. But her thoughts remained with Miss Driscoll and this wonderful new world where she was to enact her Self.

Tom Holby soon realized that he had only an empty shell in his arms and he put her back into her chair.

But Miss Driscoll had been carried away by another dancer, and Mem found herself alongside a man whom she recognized as an author of continuities, also one of the chief spirits of the Screen Writers' Guild and one of the chief officers of the Writers' Club, and he introduced himself as Mr. Hobbes, saying that he had been watching her work for some time and that she had a distinct personality, a peculiar photographic genius. "I'd love to write something around you," he said.

Mem chuckled with the infantile pride of discovering that she had fans, ten of them! She also had a Me, and an altar was rising in it.

When Miss Driscoll returned, pan ne and mopping her brow, she said to Mr. Hobbes: "You lay off'n my star! I seen her first."

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Hobbes, "I've been dreaming about her for weeks."

Mem felt divinely foolish as the washbone of such a rivalry. But when Tom Holby drifted back, as always, and Ned Ling came up to glorify her with attentions, both of them felt that she was cut off from them by some transparent but impassable cloud.

Mem found it a marvelous thing to have geniuses begging for the privilege of writing the words to the music of her beauty, libretios for her in her personality.

She had met some few authors and those few so briefly, that she still thought of them as miracle workers of a peculiar mystery, creators who made out little universes at their own sweet will.

The back continuity writers she had encountered had not confirmed this quaint theory. But she soon learned that most of them, somewhat like the dwellers on a certain famous island, earned a precarious existence by stealing one another's plots were even lucky enough to touch the hem of the garment of one of them she would ask him:

"How on earth do you ever think of your plots?"

In good time she would learn to know some of the most famous of the men and women who plowed with a pen and were as much hitched to it as it to them. And she would find them also poor, harrowed, plain people, wondering what life is all about and why their sawdust dolls would not be have like humanity. Each of them had his or her favorite critics who made life a burden and every new work a harvest

Still, for a time, it was drinking the milk of paradise and feeding on honeydew to find herself inspiring strangers with a desire to build stories as airships and chariots for her to ride and drive to glory. It was wonderful to have strange persons writing in from nowhere and everywhere imploring her to touch their manuscripts with her life giving radiance, make them walk and lift their authors out of their hells of oblivion

When the compliment became a commonplace it became a bore, a nuisance, a pest, an outrage. An amazing number of strangers wrote her that their life stories would make her rich and famous and were fur more dramatic than the works of Griffith, Jeanie Macpherson, John Emerson, Anita Loos, Marion Fairfax, June Mathis, Thompson Buchanan, J. G Hawks, Charles Kenyon, Monte Katterjohn, and the other photoplaywrights

She answered such letters as she could by hand and labored to avoid repetitions of phrase. Then she set her mother to work to copying out forms, and finally made her mother sign them with her best imitation of Mem's name.

"And now I'm a forger!" gasped Mrs. Steddon. "What next?"

By and by both of them were so overcrowded with the increasing task of answering letters from every kind of person, ranging from little girls of eight to elderly Japanese gentlemen, and offering everything from a prayer for a photograph to an opportunity to pay off a mortgage, that Mem began to hate and revile her admirers.

Here and there was a letter of gracious charm, a real spell, some sore-heart cured, a word of rewarding gratitude from one who felt a debt to her art, a glimpse of some wretch with a cancer of ambition gnawing a hapless soul. Young girls, unluckily married and dwelling on farms far distant from Los Angeles, described the color of their hair and eyes, and the compliments they had had from their neighbors, and begged to be brought to Los Angeles that they might trade their messes of potines for their birthrights of wealth and renown. They opened their windows to Los Angeles as to the cuy of deliverance—which it had been to a multitude

Sometimes the letter unconsciously conveyed more landscape and character than a laborious author could achieve, and carried with it an air of helpless doom that was heart-breaking. There were many of the following sort:

Dear Mis Steddon

May I interduce my self to you? I'm a little Arizona Girl, an I want to know how to be come a Movie Star

Will you please take A few minutes of your time an tell me all about it

Does it take lots of money to be come a Movie Star

Every sence I was 15 years old I've craved to be a star

My people Objected very much.

When I Was 17 I began Work & when 19 I Married

I An husband separated, so Now Im on the plains with my fauther an Mather. I have a 2 months Old baby boy.

I'll be 21 in Feb. Im call'a dis apointed brunette. I weight 117 —5 ft. 4 in. I think Ill send you a little Picture of my self so you can see for your self how I look

I am a prity good dancir. As I was prity busy my self I must go.

Please take a few Minutes An drope me a few lines about this

Yours truly.

MRS. JACOB LATTON

Youth might break through the heaps of fate, though Mem could only answer that thousands of experienced actresses were out of work and there was little chance. There was less hope still for the dowdy middle-ages who wrote from mid Western villages inclosing photographs that would have sealed their chances if they had had any; but they wanted to know how to get famous quick

Actors without experience, authors who could not spell, some of every imaginable and unimaginable disability, sent their plans to this new goddess, and she was as helpless to grant them as the gods above have always been to respond to the petitions that rain toward them from the volcanic fires of the molten hearts of this world.

Mem could not answer even with advice. And she felt that she was making enemies everywhere faster than friends.

Fame, too, has its income tax to pay, and the rate increases by the same doubling and trebling with which the government punishes success in the form of money.

Writhing at the humiliations of obscurity, Mem was coming swiftly up into the humiliations of conspicuity

The letter from the hold-up man was followed by another less mortifying, but no less belittling to her pride. She had just been glowing with the first thrill of the first requests for her photograph and for her autograph, paid for in advance by flattery, if not postage, when her eager eyes met this—from Yuma—written by a landlady who carried her hash-making propensities into her English:

Miss Remember Steddon
nee Mrs. John Woodville
Bermond Studios
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Madame:

Seeing as I seen your pitcure at the theater here last night and recognized you as the lady who left a trunk here saying she would send for it as soon as she and her husband got theirselves located and you never done so and going to the mooving pitcure the other nihgt as I say I saw you or so I believ on the screen as Miss Steddon and very pretty you was to I must admit and so how about your trunk is what I an asking and their is storage charges onto it and Mrs. Driscott who is still with me and seen the picure with me says to ask you do you remember her asking you about being a Woodville and your name was ashamed of your self making folks or rather that he didant have no folks at all and she notices as you used another name and hopeing to hear from you soon and do what is right is my motto and I espect other folks to do the sam

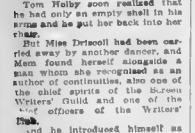
DAILY SHORT STORY—BROKEN RECORD

By Corona Remington

IT was a meek little Lettie Manning that made her way along the familiar flower-bordered paths toward the house. A second later she was surrounded by a bevy of younger Manningses who almost stifled her in their welcome.



"Why, daughter, dear, how thin you look." was Mrs. Manning's first comment.

"Been working pretty hard, mother, but just think of two whole weeks to do what I please in."

Already she was catching the enthusiasm of the youngsters who were dancing around.

"Old Sockies got a little black and white calf and Walter's got two pet rabbits," Isabel informed her sister. "And you can have lots of milk to drink and get fat on."

Lettie hugged the tiny sprite and slowly made her way into the house, carefully dodging little bare feet as they danced along beside her.

As soon as possible Mrs. Manning cleared the room of children and sat down to talk to her eldest daughter.

"I'm afraid stenography isn't agreeing with my Lettie," said her mother. "You know you don't actually have to do it, dear. We can get along without it."

"Oh, no, Mother, I like it. I'm all right."

"Are you sure nothing's the matter?"

"Why, of course not, Mumsey." Subconsciously she dropped into her old pet name for her mother. "Why should there be anything wrong?"

Mrs. Manning had to accept her daughter's statement, but she was not entirely convinced. Sometimes mothers' instinct tells women things about their children as plainly as if they were spoken

Supper had passed cheerfully enough and after the dishes were washed they all adjourned to the living room

"Oh, and we have a new fox trot Walter bought with some money he made hoeing the Weston cow to pasture every day."

"And they play it all day long," put in the mother semi-tragically.

Not Reassuring

"Want is it?" asked ettie

"Love's Phantasy," they chorused. "Wait till you hear it. It's grand! We'll play it for you now"

Love's Phantasy! Of all the luck! The very recollection of the tune turned her sick. Love's Phantasy. And she and Phil had called it their fox trot because they both loved it so. And now to hear it sound out over the hour all day long! Certainly some souls are trid almost beyond endurance. She realized that it would be useless to explain she did not like the record; it would but influence her younger sisters and brothers in the same way.

As the familiar notes came to her ears Lettie's mind was lured back to a time recently passed, and she lived over the short, wonderful weeks when she and Phil together had planned their future together

Lettie Manning, that makes ten times we've played it without stopping and I don't believe you heard it once" The boy was indignant and decidedly aggrieved

Lettie looked up and flushed "I—I did hear it," she answered "It is lovely but now I guess I'll go to bed I'm just a little tired"

Worn out from her trip she slept rather late the next morning and was awakened by the elusive melody of Love's Phantasy coming up to her from below. But that was only the first of many, many times that she was doomed to hear it that day. It was almost a continual performance, with hardly a stop for meals.

For three solid days Lettie endured it somehow, then she made up her mind that martyrs were out of fashion, besides, being a martyr was too disagreeable anyhow.

By nine o'clock that evening everyone was in bed except herself. Mrs Manning complained of a headache and went up right after supper, and Lettie had sent the children off as soon as she possibly could When everything was quiet she picked up the flash light, went over to the graphophone and hunted out the offend ing record, then stole out of the house and down the walk toward the gate She went out of the yard and down the deserted country lane. After she had gone a short distance she left the road and slipped into a little woodland

There" she said aloud as she struck the disc with the flashlight "if I can't forget, at least I don't have to remember all the time"

She could easily have gotten rid of the record in a number of other ways, but she wanted the satisfaction of smashing it And it was a satisfaction She felt decidedly better and walked briskly back to the house As she put her hand on the gate a voice behind her spoke.

A Sudden Vision.

"Don't be afraid, dear It's only Phil."

"You!" she gasped incredulously, starting back.

"Yes, Ah, don't go, Lettie. I've come all this way to see you because I couldn't bear it any longer, and I—I want you to take the ring back "

"But you swore you never could love a girl whose politics and religion were not the same as yours, and I refused to change, and I still do"

"But, darling, I've changed—not my politics nor my religion, but my mind. I've found out that I couldn't live without you. Our souls are trid almost beyond endurance. She realized that it would be useless to explain she did not like the record; it would but influence her younger sisters and brothers in the same

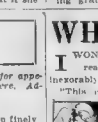
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By ANN LISLE

I WONDERED if Virginia were reading my mind as she said inexorably

"This is between us, Anne. Between you and me alone.'



I'd come to the meeting with Virginia prepared to make my own terms. They included a farewell for Neal and Phoebe But with the sentiento cordiale established between us through the laughter of reminiscence, I realized that there was no turning back.to cloofness. No longer could I demand that Virginia address and retract the bitter things she said to me the long-ago evening when Phoebe whisked out of my life

The suspense of the day when Virginia went half mad looking for her little sister, has undoubtedly left its mark. Virginia is bitter against Phoebe. She feels that she has cause to be aggrieved

In a sudden rush of warm it came to me that I couldn't do anything less diplomatic than interfere between Harrison and Harrison. To demand anything for Phoebe from Virginia wouldn't do a bit of good. Instead of bringing them together, it would drive us apart. But as long as Rosa Cordova is Virginia's guest, Virginia and I cannot appear to be on any but friendly terms.

As silence fell between us, interrupted only by our order for crisp salad and coffee, I had given to answer Virginia's pointed query.

"This is between us, Anne, Between you and me alone."

Virginia took the silence. Her voice had a note of constraint

"I couldn't do less than offer my hospitality to Rosa Cordova. That must have been Jim's idea when he sent her to me. His letter of introduction told me what he expected. After I'd taken Mrs Cordova under my roof I realized the inevitable next step."

"You mean," I flung out yielding to the pent-up bitterness of months, "that you telephoned me because the Harrison pride can't brook the idea of an outsider knowing there's anything wrong within our ranks."

"Precisely. OUR ranks," said Virginia, stonily.

"Virginia, Rosa Cordova is—in business. Yet you invite her into your home. You accept her, and whether you like her or dislike her, I'm sure you don't question her being socially well-placed." I urged

"You are right. And I see your point," answered Virginia without making any pretense of not understanding. "You are asking me to retract all I said about you going into business. I can't. My attention toward Rosa Cordova is governed by Jim. She's working with him. Your might say it is entirely in terms of Jim. But you're Jim's wife. You're working independently of him. I'm not guaranteeing you his approval, but I promise to make a stand against Jim. Are we back where we started?"

"I like your honesty," I said slowly. "We've had a laugh or two—not at, but with each other, so we can afford to define terms now. You're telling me that you accept me—but not my work. Is that it?"

"You've acted like a thoroughbred today," returned Virginia, ignoring my question. "You've carried off what might have been a trying situation with a grace I sincerely admire You've shown stamina, I admire character—in I'm not sure Jim will like you starting a little business of your own. I don't approve either. I don't like you taking up bachelor girl quarters with Carlotta. There are probably a lot of things about me and my actions you don't like. Am I making myself clear?"

"You mean—fair exchange?" I asked

"Just that. I'll not interfere with you. You'll show me the same toleration. We accept each other. "You're you and I am I. Neither is to make a racket about the color of the other's hair—or the shade of her prejudices"

"You have thought it out," I interrupted, pigeon-holing the consideration of Virginia's marked stress on Jim's probable attitude.

"Yes," acknowledged Virginia, simply, "I've done a great deal of thinking about this. I began when Rosa Cordova came to use. I couldn't bear to have anyone see what a blind alley you and I had plunged into."

"Rosa, least of all?" I hazarded.

"Rosa, least of all, acknowledged Virginia.

Then, with a murmur of delight, she looked up from her crisp salad.

"This is delicious. I'm actually sorry I didn't tell Pat to join us."

"You weren't sure enough of how things would go?" I hazarded.

Virginia laughed tolerantly and warmly. Her amused eyes admitted me to a fellowship she'd never before let me share. But her words confessed a snobbishness I'd not dreamed had any part in this particular affair

"Of course, I realize how much poise and efficiency you must have to manage your business affairs as Pat tells me you are doing "

"As Pat tells you?" I questioned, with an emphasis I knew contained my meaning, which was: "How did he dare to discuss me—or even to mention my name? Wasn't I completely persona non grata to you?"

Origin of "Boycott"

THIS term, expressive of ostracizing or having nothing to do with a person or institution, originated when a group of Irish farmers adopted this method of remonstrating with their landlord, whose name was Boycott.

Landru—His Secret Love Affairs

First Authentic Story of French Bluebeard, Who Won 283 Women, Written By William Le Queux

LANDRU, the arch criminal, found it amazingly easy to persuade his victims to make over their money to him. For instance, in the case of Elise Laport, soon after their marriage, he said: "I do not know, dearest, whether it has already occurred to you that our fortunes should be united, like our hearts."

"No, Raoul," was the reply. "It has never occurred to me."

"Well," he said, "with your consent and approval, darling, I propose to draft a document, which you can sign, by which your money at the Credit Lyonnais goes into our joint account, while I, on my part, will put twenty thousand francs to your credit in a private account—just as a little present—so that you may have your own money; and you can add to it from time to time," he said, with well-feigned generosity. "If you agree, then we will sign the document now, and tomorrow I will send them to my lawyer in Paris to execute."

To her it seemed quite a natural suggestion to unite their fortunes as their hearts were linked together, so she consented.

Thereupon, he crossed to the table, and quickly wrote out two documents, the wording of which was already in his mind. Then, rising, he clasped her in his arms, and pressing his lips passionately to hers, said in a deep, earnest voice:

"My own darling, I—I somehow hate to do this, but it is in our mutual interests. It is a wretched thing to talk business with one I love so well. So let us sign and get it over—eh?"

The pretty young woman remained silent and motionless for a few moments. Landru's shrewd eyes, however, noticed a sudden change in her. For a few seconds she held her breath. Then, looking him full in the face, she replied in a hard voice:

"Yes, Raoul, I will sign—but on one condition—that you give me over your suit case—locked just as it is."

"Why? What do you mean, dearest?" asked her "husband," in surprise.

"I mean," she echoed in a firm voice, her face pale and set, "that you are not what you pretend to be, my dear Raoul—or whatever your name really is! To my friend, Henriette Picard, you were Henri Mignot, advocate! To me you are Raoul Dupont, rentier—without an estate! I have, since our marriage, set inquiries on foot, and I know the truth. Now, give me your suit case, with its mysterious little velvet-lined box with the blue phial inside—or I will instantly ring for the police. You have duped me, but I have laid this trap for you—my dear, false lover, with those honeyed words upon your lips." She laughed triumphantly, with biting sarcasm. "Your name is not Dupont, but Henri Mignot, escroc and gaolbird! Only yesterday I knew the truth, and now that you have betrayed your motive, I have resolved to call the police, and have them arrest you! They will be highly interested in the documents you have just drawn up! I have suspected you all along—and now my suspicions are confirmed that you are an escroc; and in that blue tube you carry so carefully in that velvet-lined case is a poison by which you intend to get rid of me so that you can have my money!"

"You devil!" hissed Landru, gritting his teeth.

"Ah!" she laughed in defiance. "Give over your weapons to me. Confess! Or I will press this bell and call the police. You are Henri Mignot, alias Dupont, and I happen to know that the Surete are in search of you under that name and under others. Come, decide!" she demanded determinedly.

"You have unlocked my bag in my presence," he cried reproachfully. "You—my wife, whom I trusted!"

"No! Your wife whom you meant to kill after she had signed that document! I defy you, you devil!" the young woman. Once he had fascinated her, but now she knew the truth, and her love had turned to loathing.

He gave vent to a fierce imprecation, but, as the curse left his lips, she sprang across to the table and seized the documents he had written. It was truly a dramatic moment. Landru's liberty, nay, his life, in that second trembled in the balance. A word from her to the police, and the revelation of his appalling crimes must inevitably result!

In one hand she held the papers, and, bounding to the door, she sought the electric bell.

But before she could reach it, Landru brought his heavy, bony fist down full into the poor young woman's face, felling her to the floor, where she lay like a log, insensible. His brutal blow caused the blood to flow from a gash in her cheek, caused by the ring he wore.

"Lie there, you little spitfire!" he said aloud, with a low laugh, as he snatched the papers from her hand.

Then, going into the adjoining room, he crammed a few things from his suit case into his pockets, including the velvet-lined case and its contents, and, lighting a cigarette, strolled airily out of the hotel as though bent upon a night walk up the Via Roma.

Crossing leisurely to the station, he discovered that the express for the French frontier at Ventimiglia would leave in twenty minutes. So, taking some of his "wife's" money, which he had found in her purse before he left, he bought a first-class ticket with wagon-lit for Paris.

He little dreamed that five hours afterwards his "wife" was already travelling with all haste after him, by way of Turin and Modane, and that, as he was going via Marseilles, she would reach Paris as soon as he did.

It was a desperate race for life. Elise Laporte was determined, at all hazards, to unmask the assassin.

The pretty war-widow, Elise Laporte, who so narrowly escaped the fate of Landru's other victims, arrived from Genoa at the Gare de Lyon in Paris at eleven o'clock at night, but the long journey having exhausted her, she drove to her own apartment to rest, determined to go to the Prefecture of Police, and relate her discovery, early next morning.

Landru arrived at the same station, from Marseilles, only half an hour afterwards. He saw that to cover his tracks was most essential, therefore, he drove straight to an unscrupulous dealer in second-hand furniture, named Caillard, whom he knew—a man who was a notorious receiver of stolen property, living at Montrouge, and with whom "Bluebeard" had had many dealings, for to him he had sold some of his victim's furniture.

The pair had met in the underworld of Paris on many occasions, and they greeted each other.

"My dear Jules!" declared Landru when closeted with his friend, who was pa?e and surprised to see him at that late hour, "I am in a serious trouble—a vindictive woman! She may go to the police. If so, they will try to trace me by watching my apartment in the Place Dancourt. You know it—you were there a month ago. Now I want you to buy the furniture. What price will you give?"

The sly old man shrugged his shoulders. He was used to purchasing goods in crooked ways, and was not at all surprised that his friend, Henri Lacoste—the name by which he knew him—was in trouble again.

"How much do you want?" he asked, whereupon Landru named a price, and the two men began haggling over it—for, as is the habit of dealers. At last a bargain was struck, and the wily old receiver went to his bedroom and brought forth a handful of notes, which he carefully counted, while Landru wrote out a receipt, taking out a stamp from the back of that famous notebook in which he registered every centime of his expenditure and receipts, and in which he entered the records of his transactions—which still remain in his handwriting as evidence against him. He signed the receipt "Raoul Dupont."

By the early morning train he traveled on to Enghien, where he took up his quarters at a small pension near the lake, under the name of Fevardent. He had thus effaced his identity, had removed his furniture from Vernouillet and stored it without trace, and had also sold his "nest of love" in the Place Dancourt.

Next day, at noon, when old Caillard arrived at the Place Dancourt to remove the furniture, he found a detective in charge, for Madame Laporte had already been to see the Surete and made her statement. At once the old dealer produced his receipt for the purchase, and as it was purposely dated three days before, the police were naturally puzzled, but were unable to prevent the removal of the household goods of Monsieur Dupont.

"I bought them from a monsieur whom I had never seen before. He simply called three days ago and offered the furniture to me, as he was going to Belgium."

Landru remained for two days at Enghien, and then went out to Beauvais for a night, afterwards slipping back to Paris and returning to his wife. He was a past-master in the art of evading the police. Their latter never connected Raoul Dupont, or the man Henri Mignot, with Henri Desire Landru, the respectable father of a family living on the other side of the capital.

The Jekyll and Hyde existence of this outstanding criminal could never have been continued but for his abnormal cunning, his vanity, and his demoniacal craftiness.

He pitted his wits against the most expert officers of the State, and he won every time. Again, he could lie as glibly as he could tell the truth, and he could be dumb and restrain the color from his face even when accused before the evidence of his crimes.

No man in all history—even including Caesar Borgia—was more painstaking concerning a murder plot, more callous, or more full of amorous sentiment and mock romance.

At the Surete, after some weeks of eager inquiry, the official report was to the effect that Mme. Laporte's statement had not been borne out by the fact, and, in consequence, the vigilance of the police concerning Raoul Dupont was dropped.

In the meantime Landru was living a respectable life with his family, though his funds were gradually melting. He therefore looked around for another and more secluded villa wherein he might entrap Mme. Heon—and others whom in future he might conquer.

One day early in November he had occasion to drive his car from Paris to Houdan, the quaint, crooked little town with a ninth century castle and a wonderful old church, situated about forty miles from the capital and half way between the great Forest of Dreux and Rambouillet. He had concluded his business at the old-fashioned Hotel de Plat d'Etain, where he lunched at the long table set in the bare room—the table at which all travelers eat at noon as in the old inns of France—and re-entering his car, took the road around the church, which leads to Paris across the Forest by way of Rambouillet. He was alone, running and he was along the straight road between the rows of bare poplars and through the pleasant little village of Maulette, when presently he came to a long straight stretch of lonely open road, two miles in length, across a forest clearing. On his left lay an isolated church, while the only other object prominent in the flat landscape was a small clump of trees beside the road, and among them a modern red-brick villa. Upon which was a board announcing that it was to let.

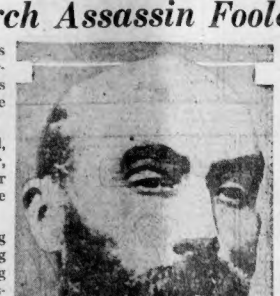
How the Arch Assassin Fooled the Police



Henri Landru, the world's greatest love criminal, carried on his terrible affairs for years with incredible boldness.

He despised the police and, as the reader will remember, cleverly duped them after the double killing of the Cuchets at Vernouillet.

He went boldly on snaring susceptible victims, securing their money and then slaying them by poison and disposing of their bodies.

He kept his own counsel and appeared after each of his deeds openly in the streets of Paris and dined at various cafes.

There was no one to tell tales about him, and he went so far in the affair of Elise Laporte as to rent an apartment within sight of a police station.

His egotism and effrontery were so great and he lied with such incredible readiness and so logically that he completely fooled all those who made inquiries about him.

His love affair with Elise Laporte, who had $50,000 in the bank, he pursued with his old bait, using the magic word "marriage" as an earnest of his sincerity.

It was through her that the police again came to grips with him.

Paris, France.

FOR the informal Summer occasion, Cheruit designs a round-necked, short-sleeved frock of white crepe de chine trimmed with green crepe de chine bands. This is girdled in green leather; belts like this are one of the whims of the Paris moment, tan and green being the best-liked among them.

AN odd scarf collar which may be twisted around the neck to form a choker, is a feature that shares honors with the surplice bodice in this black crepe marocain frock by Rolande.

—CORRECT ENGLISH—

1. What is the meaning of the last word in "There is a fountain in the patio"? How is patio pronounced?
2. What is a patios? How is it pronounced?
3. What is amiss with this? "The boy tried to move the rock. Which he found very heavy."

ANSWERS.

1. A patio, pronounced "pa'te-o," is the open inner court of a Spanish or Spanish-American dwelling.
2. A patios pronounced 'pa-te-o,' is an illiterate dialect, often local.
3. Do not make a separate sentence of a subordinate clause beginning with "which." Say, instead: "The boy tried to move the rock, which he found very heavy."

Increased Radio Range

YOU will be able to add many miles to the practical range of your crystal receiving set if you will use a resonator coil and buzzer to pick out the most sensitive spot on the crystal.

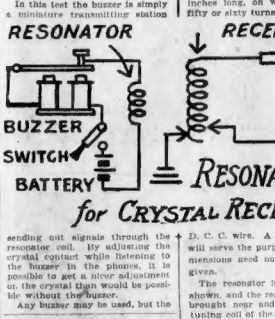
In this test the buzzer is simply a miniature transmitting station sending out signals through the resonator coil. By adjusting the crystal contact while listening to the buzzer in the phones, it is possible to get a nicer adjustment, or the crystal than would be possible without the buzzer.

Any buzzer may be used, but the buzzers especially sold for the purpose are best. The battery is a couple of dry cells.

The resonator is a piece of wood or cardboard about one and half inches in diameter and three inches long, on which is wound fifty or sixty turns of No. 24 or 26 D. C. C. wire. A gas mantle box will serve the purpose, and the dimensions need not be exactly as given.

The resonator is connected as shown, and the resonator coil then brought near and parallel to the tuning coil of the receiver. When the buzzer is started up, it should be heard in the phones. The most sensitive spot on the crystal is then easily found.

This adjustment may be made even while listening to a concert by placing the resonator slightly at an angle to the tuning coil, so that the buzzer is very faintly heard. The sensitive spot may then be found without interfering with reception.



Answers to Radio Fans

R. K. L., Boston—The advantage of a tens and units-method of tapping a coil is that it does away with the necessity for a condenser for close tuning. This not only saves the cost of the condenser, but makes for slightly greater sensitivity. The secondary of a loose-coupler may be tuned in this way. Two switch arms are used in this method. One arm engages nine points, which are connected to taps taken off every turn for nine turns beginning at one end of the coil. The remaining turns are tapped at every ten turns to the end of the coil. One side of the circuit is connected to one switch arm, and the other side to the other arm. Tuning is done roughly with the tens switch with the units switch on the first tap. The fine tuning is done with the units switch.

R. A. L., Cambridge—Your hook-up is correct with the exception that you have omitted a phone condenser. These condensers are very inexpensive, and you will increase the strength of your signals by using one.

SNAPPED LORD AMPTILL'S SON IN GIRL'S GOWN

London, July 26.—Society circles here, which were kept on the qui vive during the recent divorce trial of the Honorable John Hugo Russell, heir of Lord Ampthill, have a new morsel to chew over.

It now appears that one of his escapades he put on women's clothes belonging to a woman friend and was photographed as a captivating young woman. Who the "friend" in the case was is as yet as much of a mystery as the whereabouts of "Baby Russell," the central figure in the sensational case, whose paternity he decided.

Plans Dig No Coal

Intelligence and Money Equal Power. Other Things

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The President says the public welfare "will not permit those who serve it to deny for any reason the supply of such a necessity as fuel." That is true, or ought to be.

However, if the American people insist on coal, which means regulation of labor and arbitration of strikes, the American people must also insist on the regulation of capital, and of wages.

The President himself has said that no man can be forced to work against his will.

Mr. Lewis, head of the coal miners, says, "The President's plan will dig no coal." That's one of the difficulties.

In the long run intelligence gets rich, lack of intelligence stays poor. Intelligence is power, therefore power is rich. Therefore wealth, as a general thing, rules from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand.

When intelligent wealth across the ocean helps intelligent wealth here, that is "intelligent conservatism."

But if labor tried to cross the ocean to help labor here, that would be Bolshevism, Socialism, and "intelligence" would soon attend to it.

Here we have a struggle between capital and labor, coal miners trying to get more money, mine owners refusing it.

If English miners came over to aid our miners, they would be thrown out or locked up.

English mine owners are sending 500,000 tons of coal to help "intelligence" here. That is conservatism.

You are told that England will send 2,000,000 tons per month.

Let those that are not satisfied become intelligent, then prosperous, and use the power that comes from combined prosperity and intelligence. That's the history of the world from the beginning.

Mayor Hylan of New York will have mounted policemen, mounted flying machines, patroling the air above the city to prevent violations of "air traffic." Anybody flying too low and endangering life will be arrested. That is brand new in the world today. It will be a mere commonplace thing fifty years from now, when all competent thieves will use flying machines and police fliers will pursue them.

The Bible Society has just sent 187,000 Bibles to Pekin, the biggest shipment ever made. That is good news, if the Chinese read and believe.

If now China would send a few million copies of the wise teachings of Confucius to this country and persuade Americans, especially "statesmen," to read them it would be gratifying. No one would compare the teachings of Confucius with those of Christ, for Christ's teachings were positive, Confucius' teachings negative.

"Don't do to others what you would not have them to do to you," says Confucius. Christianity improves on that with "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Would it be dreadful inflation if the government printed a little more money with which to pay its debts, redeem its bonds and give soldiers the bonus they ought to have?

The total amount of money in circulation in July was not quite five billions, $39.87 for every human being in the country.

If the government printed five billion dollars more of money that would help enormously. Would the country go to the dogs, would our dollar be worthless if there were in circulation, say, $80 for every inhabitant? Is $80 too much for each American to absorb and handle without sending the nation financially to the bow-wows?

Dog Executions

President of Animal Rescue League Explains Kind of Animals Disposed of

ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—We received here during the last twelve months 5,430 dogs. A very great majority of the dogs that are brought to us, and that our men pick up on the streets, are dogs that you yourself would not wish to take into your home. The reason they are on the streets, or given up, is because they are sick or vicious, or not house-broken, or troublesome in some way that would make them a menace to the community, or prevent anyone from keeping them.

What would be the use of our having this establishment to prevent suffering and cruelty to animals, and taking in animals only to send them out again to meet with, very likely, the same fate we took them from?

What would be the sense in supporting and keeping alive a large number of dogs that are only a source of suffering to themselves and to human beings?

We exercise the greatest possible care in placing dogs in homes. Last year we placed 1,039 dogs, and you may be sure that we do not as a rule put really good and desirable young male dogs to death.

You say that you "wonder whether or not any effort was made before these dogs were executed to find their owners or whether it was a brutal, ruthless slaughter."

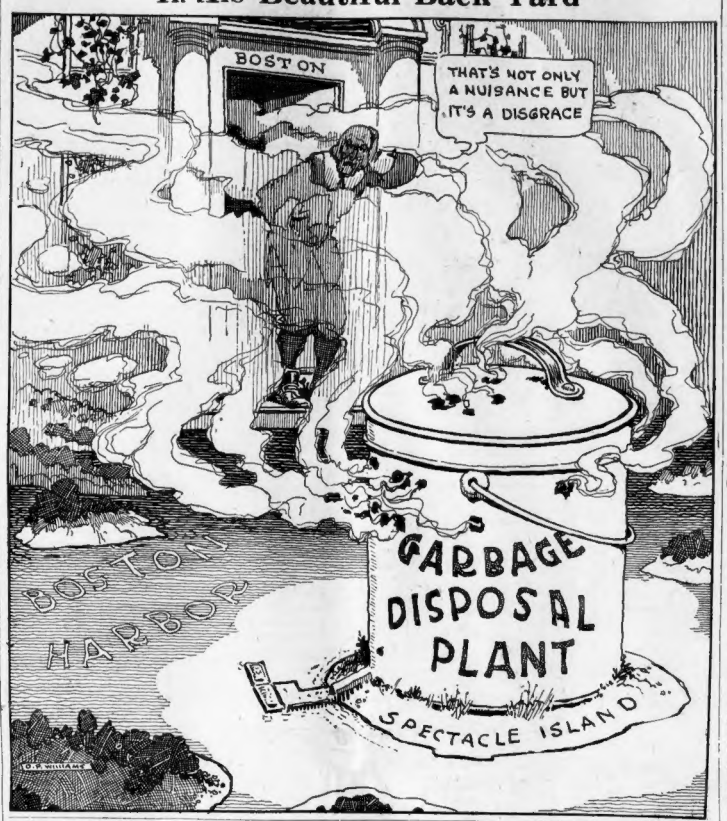
We have the daily papers and have one of our clerks cut out all the "Lost" advertisements every morning. We enter these in a scrapbook with the date beside the cutting; then our head kennel man compares the dogs that are brought in with these advertisements. In the statement from which you quote, you will note that we restored last year 140 lost dogs to owners. Every week we telephone or write to addresses, asking men or women to come in and look at our dogs and see if the dogs we have belong to them.

Please give us credit for common humanity.

Yours very truly,
ANNA HARRIS SMITH,
MRS. HUNTINGTON SMITH,
President.

We publish a letter from the president of the Animal Rescue League. It is in reply to an editorial which we printed recently calling attention to the fact that nearly 4,000 dogs had been put to death in the last year, expressing a doubt whether such a slaughter was necessary. Had we known that these dog executions had been with the consent or under the direction of the Animal Rescue League, we should not have expressed the doubt for we have always known that the Animal Rescue League was doing a fine work for our helpless pets.

In His Beautiful Back Yard



The Voice of New England

Hit Nail on Head

Editor Boston American:

The Arbuckle letters in the Boston American hit the nail so squarely on the head that I wish to add more to it. Yes, what right has Hays got to keep the Arbuckle pictures off the screen? Arbuckle was cleared of the charge and millions of people want to see his pictures. I can see nothing but mean spite work in Hays' actions. It is very doubtful if such a man as Hays will improve the screen by such actions.

SPITE WORK.

Bigotry

Editor Boston American:

Most of the people I have heard condemning Roscoe Arbuckle would be ridiculous in their narrow-minded bigotry were it not for the fact that they have it in their power to do more harm than can be corrected by the smaller percentage of common sense people. They remind me of the callow, pimply-faced youths and others who crack jokes about Ford cars and call Ford a fool and a nut. Mr. Ford is peculiar, but compared with myself or those youths he is no fool.

FAIR PLAY.

Starving Babies

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial of July 20 with the heading, "Aid Starving Russian Babies," is timely. It is also timely for a call to the churches to reconstruct society according to the Gospel of Christ.

It has come to a pretty pass when laymen have to make the first move. The allied countries, including our own, showed a fine Christian spirit in blockading Soviet Russia in the starving of non-combatants on account of a difference in politics. It is time then for the so-called Christian nations to bring into being something that they have never tried out and which would remedy the present ills of the existing social order, namely, "Applied Christianity."

Like the Frog

Editor Boston American:

If every citizen should reason and act as "Unregistered" does, the American people would soon be reduced to the pitiable plight of the frogs in Aesop's fable after they had besought Jupiter to send them a king. It seems to me some "deep thinkers" and frogs are not far removed. Apparently, "Unregistered" does not realize that this is a free country, that any citizen, if born here, no matter how humble his surroundings, can aspire to become the head of the greatest nation in the world, and that absentee voters are usually the cause why good men are often defeated for public office. About 620 B. C. Solon prescribed laws for the good of the Athenian Republic and they could well be applied to certain "Unregistered" of this State.

The following extract, commenting on some of Solon's laws, is taken from Goldsmith's History of Greece:

"All persons who, in public dissensions and differences, espoused neither party, but continued to act with a blameable neutrality, were declared infamous, condemned to perpetual banishment, and to have all their estates confiscated. Nothing could more induce mankind to a spirit of patriotism than this celebrated law. A mind thus obliged to take part in public concerns, learns from habit to make those concerns its principal care, and self-interest quickly sinks before them. By this method of accustoming the minds of the people to look upon that man as an enemy that should appear indifferent and unconcerned in the misfortunes of the public, he provided the State with a quick and general resource in every dangerous emergency."

HE SOUGHT JAIL IN PLACE OF HIS DOG

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

"PLEASE let me go to jail in place of my dog!" That was the pathetic plea of a citizen of Hoboken, who thereby enrolled his name in a new Abou ben Adham class.

Strick's dog, Sport, bit a child while in play with her. The police acted on society's ever-present dread of hydrophobia and took the dog to the public pound for observation.

Strick, sorely stricken because of pity for his canine friend, pleaded with the court: "I'm willing to go to jail if my dog is released. I'll go right away, only let the dog out. He is pining away. He is used to music and good food. There is no music where he is, and he is not getting the food he should. Please let me go to jail for him."

The court was sorry for Strick, but could not grant his request, for after all it was the dog and not the man that had bitten the girl.

We would like to know Charles Strick. We venture to say that he is a most lovable man. And we would like to know the dog that could win such loyalty from his master. He certainly has succeeded in making humanly contagious his characteristically canine quality of faithfulness.

Love me, love my dog is a classic aphorism among those who best appreciate this friendliest of all animals that associate with man.

Many a dog has been known to make the supreme sacrifice for his master's sake, but this happens to be the first case that has come to our knowledge of a man's willingness to make any appreciable sacrifice for the dog's sake.

Such a statement may merely betray our ignorance of canine love. Therefore, we hasten to say that we are willing to believe that there is a democracy of mutuality in the love of dog and man.

We certainly have no wish to sponsor the cynicism of the faithless human who said that the better he knew men the more he liked dogs.

On the other hand, as one who believes and expects the best of human things, we are nevertheless bound to assert that our race would be much farther advanced towards divinity if the average of us had achieved the love and loyalty, the faithfulness and devotion of a dog.

Many a rhapsody has been written about the dog. So orthodox a Christian as the late Bishop Doane of Albany expressed belief that the dog has a soul and would meet his master, his human master, in Heaven.

In the present writer's opinion, the highest praise of this animal is from the masterful pen of the Belgian Shakespeare, Maurice Maeterlinck, in his essay on Our Friend, the Dog.

Therein he says that the canine is the only animal species that has succeeded in breaking through the wall that separates the animal kingdom from the human.

And that the dog is an inspiring example to us, in that he knows and lives intimately with his god, Man.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

PEOPLE born today are noted for their clarity of thought and judgment. They are resolute and fearless thinkers, and once their minds are resolved upon one course it is extremely hard to swerve them into another.

Today is one of unusually propitious outlook. Push your business to the utmost and do not hesitate to execute any decisions you may make un' 1 9 p. m.

Sometime during the ensuing year you will find yourself involved in unpleasant relations with the opposite sex. If unmarried, avoid quarrels.

A child born today will be serious minded and rather solitary in disposition. Do not refuse it any tools or implements it may ask for.

ARE YOU A KILL-JOY AT HOME?

Better to come right out with what you have on your mind rather than sputter around and complain for days and weeks in a way that is hard to understand. Get it over with and settled.

If you have a grievance against some person and are venting it in installments, have a regular setto, instead, if necessary, and then forget it.

Much bickering in homes would be avoided and more happiness engendered if there were less daily rumbling and grumbling and more direct and positive statement, and understanding.

The latter method may be a bit severe for a time, and the result more serious perhaps, if there is not the desire to forgive and forget, and start anew, with all the scores wiped out.

Nothing drives happiness from home so quickly as the habit of constant differences in the family circle.

Grumbling is a habit.

Easy to cultivate and hard to get away from, is grumbling.

How about it, don't you do more grumbling around home than you should?

SEEN AND HEARD

OFFICIAL name of Boston's green space near corner of Washington and Dakota streets, Dorchester, is Crown Park. But since Park Department put in seats to accommodate around 100 there, it has been christened a new name locally. It is now called, for reasons that are obvious, "Mothers' Rest."

A batch of Universalist ministers from Boston and vicinity left for Old Orchard Beach in an automobile. After passing the Maine line and nearing the town of York, they lost their way. Asking a policeman to help them, he greeted them with a wide smile, exclaiming: "Boys, I know you are sports by your looks. Can't you give me something to drink." The ministers said that they were going to a temperance meeting. The policeman beat a hasty retreat.

It's a perfectly good broom; well-made, the kind that any housewife would be glad to use. JOHN D. W. BODFISH, the blind attorney from Hyannis who is a candidate for attorney-general, made it himself and keeps it in his office.

"Looks significant—you're not going to put on your dust cap, too, are you, if you get Mr. Allen's seat?" someone asked him.

Bodfish laughed, but intimated that there was always a chance for a bit of housecleaning.

Bodfish is an expert craftsman in the art of broom-making, carpet-weaving and cane-seating.

People who chanced to be in Tremont street the other evening saw a new device now being employed by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company in locating trouble with underground wires. A feed wire between Scollay square and Beacon street had become grounded. Dragging a triangular-shaped affair along the street the trouble was finally located and instead of having to dig a long stretch of the street in search of the grounded single hole was made and in a short time the big feed wire was again in operation.

"The Summer band has one cinch job—
"The drummer's" writes "A Girl" in rhyme;
"Others must stay the concert through,
"But he can 'beat it' any time!"

War-time safety razors still clog the market. Man on his way to or from some new blades for his shaving machinery yesterday glanced into a Summer street window and decided to buy a new razor with a set of blades, since the price for the outfit was just a cent cheaper than the blades for his old razor alone would cost him.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON EVOLUTION

By Garrett P. Serviss

DAVID STARR JORDAN, taking up, in "Science," the recent statements of Professor William Bateson that we have no clear answer to give as to the origin of species, and that, "although our faith in evolution remains unshaken, we have no acceptable account of the origin of species," remarks that "this statement must mean one of two things.

"It may be a large and generous gesture disclaiming for science, for the most that science can do is to record the 'observed sequence of events'; or we may interpret it as a revelation of the speaker's ignorance of the researches of field investigators and students of geographical distribution generally."

Jordan goes to say: "As a matter of fact, no phenomenon of nature is better understood than that of the origin of species, taking the word species in its original and natural definition as a definable form of animal or plant life as now existing on the globe. In the study of any one of these we find the inherent factors of heredity and variation, the survival of individuals adapted to their environment, thereby perpetuating in a general way their particular traits."

Inasmuch as Professor Bateson's persistently misinterpreted and certainly unfortunate statements were the spark that rekindled the fire of theological and scholastic opposition to the teaching of "Darwinism," it is interesting to have, from so unswerving a student of nature as Dr. Jordan, such correctness as this.

"It is true," he says, "that the accumulation of facts in regard to each one of hundreds of thousands of individual species shows endless variety in the details of modified divergence. It is therefore impossible to condense in a single phrase all that we know of its phases unless with Darwin we use the term 'natural selection' as the antithesis to supernatural creation and adjustment, thus including in one word not only the results of the survival of the fit, but also all other natural processes which may be coincident with it."

It is well for the cause of truth that the name of Darwin should continue to be prominently used in connection with the evolutionary doctrine even when later investigations have led to modification of some of his views, just as it was well for France under Richelieu to defend the old stronghold at Verdun, on account of its prestige, even though it represented in some ways an antiquated system of defense.

Darwin himself would unquestionably revise some things in his books if he were now alive, but there is no fundamental error underlying the great principles that he proclaimed. The enemies of evolutionary science look upon Darwin's fame as their foes' very stronghold, the casting down of which would be hailed as a sign of defeat.

But it will not be cast down, and no man will listen with patience to the aspersions now thrown upon Darwin who has read the closing sentence of his first great book.

Those words grandeur in this view of life, with its several powers, having been originally breathed by the Creator into a few forms or into one, and that, while this planet has gone cycling on according to the fixed law of gravity, from so simple a beginning endless forms most beautiful and most wonderful have been, and are being evolved."

—Medbury Says—

The Game of Love Is Like Marbles, You Don't Always Play for Keeps

When a man proposes to a girl the first thing he tells her is that he's not good enough for her.

Never do this, because, after you marry her, she'll tell it to you herself.

Still, the guy who tells his sweetheart that he's not worthy of her usually spends the rest of his life proving it.

It's all right for a girl to swear to love, honor and obey provided she's got her fingers crossed while she's doing it.

The game of love is like marbles, you don't always play for keeps.

The girl has to knuckle down, while the guy goes shooting all over town.

The custom of the man getting down on his knees when he proposes is passe.

After a guy proposes to three or four girls in an evening his knees get tired.

One bird asked six girls to marry him before he found one that could say "yes."

It wasn't until he spoke to the sixth that he discovered he'd been proposing to foreigners.

Very few girls go a month without being proposed to, but the trouble is, they don't know whether the man is serious or just rehearsing.

Some guys propose to a girl they don't want to marry just to get their speech broken in before they ask the girl they really love.

You've got to propose to some girls every time you call on them or they feel neglected.

Then as soon as you stop proposing to them, they sue you for breach of promise.

A man never knows where he stands when he kneels.

Every man proposes differently, that's why a dame never accepts the first few guys that ask her.

She answers him like she would a bill collector, and tells him to come around again the first of the week.

She never refuses him on the spot, she's like a hangman and keeps her men in suspense.

The average dame is very wary, not many of them will turn you down unless they're engaged to somebody else.

And some of them are so skeptical that they never like to say "no" to you until they're married.
